Bradley Suggests Rearming Germany

Tigers Slug Nats Again, 11-8; Climb Into Lead

4-Run Rally in 9th Short, Griffs Suffer 7th Loss in Row; Ostrowski Homers

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

The Nats exposed their six-game losing streak to the Tigers yesterday—and then there were seven. At the day's end, there was also a new leader of the American League, the Tigers.

They licked the Nats, the poor devils, 11 to 8, in a 32-hit slugfest, and took over first place in the standing from the Yankees who were getting a complete 16-2 drubbing from the Indians up in the Bronx.

Out of it, the Nats managed to salvage a moderate bit of respect, however, with a four-run ninth inning that at one point had their 3697 customers suspecting they might wipe out all of a 11-4 deficit. But that idea vanished completely when Eddie Yost took a third strike with his bat on his shoulder.

Hutchinson Chased

Into that ninth, the Nats packed six of their 16 hits and drove Freddie Hutchinson to cover. But by that time it was too late to eradicate all the damage done in runs to the Tigers.

Haynes couldn't last out the second inning, surrendering four runs in that one, and his 1-0 lead. He walked three in that session, hit one, gave up a damaging double by Hoot Evers, and forced over a run before Hittle moved in.

It was the Tigers' 20th victory in 23 road games this year and netted them the league lead.

The Tigers lifted their lead to 8-1 against Hittle in the fifth, with Hutchinson personally driving in two runs, and Lipon scoring two more on a gift hit that Ostrowski and Robertson played into a triple by shooing each other off the lazy fly to center field.

Three double plays cut down the Nats in the early innings. After Sherry Robertson singled home Yost in the first, and left the bases full, Ostrowski got Hutchinson out of trouble with a tap into the box that eventuated as a pitcher-to-home-to-first double killing.

Cass Michaels lined to Kell for another double play with two on and none out in the fifth, and in the sixth the Nats were held to a single run because Evans grounded to Lipon for a double play.

While the Tigers were scoring in clusters, the Nats were plodding scoring one run at a time in the first, sixth, seventh and eighth. Going into the ninth, the Tigers were leading, 11-4, after picking up a run against Dick Weik on Kell's long triple to center.

Stewart opened the ninth with a single to center, but was forced by Michaels. Then Noren beat out a bunt and Robertson singled to right for a run. Ostrowski slammed a massive homer with two on into the center field bleachers, his first in a Wash-

$3,000,000 Fire Burns Rare Papers

Ann Arbor, Mich., June 6 (AP).—Haven Hall, 87-year-old University of Michigan campus landmark, was all but destroyed by fire late today.

Only the walls remained standing when the blaze was brought under control.

Worst loss was destruction of the university's bureau of government library, containing 33,643 volumes and hundreds of municipal, State and National Government documents, many irreplacable.

University Vice President Robert P. Briggs estimated it would cost three million dollars to replace the building and its contents.

Senate Approves Farm Bill, 46-5, in Early Morning Vote

BULLETIN

The Senate passed the farm price supports bill shortly before 1 a. m. today. The vote was 46 to 5. A motion to recommit the measure failed, earlier, by a vote of 21 to 30.

The Senate was still in session early today seeking a vote on a bill to give another two billion dollars to the farm-price-support program after beating back Republican-led efforts to trim both the total amount and prices guaranteed to farmers.

Final voting was delayed several hours by Senator John J. Williams (R., Del.), who read a 28-page statement attacking past accounting methods of the Commodity Credit Corp., which will handle the measure. The CCC's borrowing authority would be increased to $6,750,000,000 under it.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas said he planned to hold the Senate in session until a vote came.

Williams objected to what he called the CCC "write-off" of a 96-milloin-dollar shortage in wartime accounts. He said the sum was the amount still unaccounted for in 1947 from an original 366 million dollars in wartime CCC funds that could not be traced in 1945.

The agency admitted writing off the money, he said. It claimed the missing 96 million dollars involved improperly recorded wartime dealings between Government agencies.

Senator Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.) said that out of some eight billion dollars spent by the CCC during the war only the 96 million dollars was unaccounted for. There had been "no showing of irregularity since the war," he said.

800 Linked In Gambling, Dope Rackets

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Senate crime probers yesterday were handed a list of 800 figures in the narcotics and allied rackets and were told that a powerful ring runs the illegal business.

Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the Senate Crime Investigating Committee said there is a definite link between the narcotics business and other forms of interstate crime. He said some of the names among the 800 were of persons encountered by the Senators on a recent trip to Florida to check into big-time gambling.

Senator Tobey (R., N. H.) said the name of Lucky Luciano, deported one-time king of the rackets — including narcotics — was mentioned during the lengthy closed-door session with Harry J. Anslinger, U. S. Commissioner of Narcotics, and two of his aides. But Tobey said no details were given and nothing was said as to Luciano's present activities. He presumably is still in his native Italy.

50 Are Major Criminals

Tobey and Kefauver said that of the 800 persons named some 50 are major criminals, while another 300 are narcotics violators. Others have been mixed up in the white-slave and similar traffic.

Tobey said there appeared to be "a powerful ring in this country with tremendous power and far-reaching influence" having a "core operated by a few." He called this "core" a "combine."

Kefauver said the 800 names would be kept secret at Anslinger's request because cases are being worked up against some of them and others are under investigation. He said they were concentrated largely in New York, Florida and California.

The Senators said all types of

37 of 65 Persons Rescued From Ditched Atlantic Plane

MIAMI, Fla., June 6 (AP).—Thirty-seven survivors from a twin-engine plane that plunged into the Atlantic were safe aboard a Navy destroyer today.

The bodies of eight others were recovered. Little hope was held that the remaining 20 occupants would be found alive.

The pilot, Joseph Halsey of Seattle, Wash., co-pilot William Holleran and the steward were among those rescued from life rafts. The plane was owned by Westair Co. of Seattle.

The 37 were picked up by the destroyer USS Saufley nearly 10 hours after the plane crashed into the Atlantic about 275 miles east northeast of Miami with 62 Puerto Rican migrant workers and three crew members aboard.

The pilot of a Navy plane in the search area contacted Halsey aboard the destroyer and quoted him as saying he was "doubtful that any other survivors would be picked up."

He said "none of the passengers understood English and so couldn't understand ditching instructions."

"Many sharks were in the vicinity of the life rafts," he said, but he did not mention any attacks.

It was later reported, however, that one man identified as Pedro Gugman died of a shark bite a few minutes after he was picked out of the water by the merchant vessel Cape Ann. The report said Gugman was attacked by the shark

Paris Upper House Defeats Measure Outlawing "Cokes"

Paris, June 6 (U.P.).—The French Senate took steps today to save Coca-Cola, as the year's hottest weather whetted the thirst of Parisians.

The Council of the Republic—France's upper House—defeated by 297 to 0 a bill providing government control of certain soft drinks, particularly Coca-Cola.

The measure, passed by the National Assembly last February, would have meant the banishment of Coca-Cola. The bill had been backed by left-wing deputies and wine growers wary of new competition.

Leads Taken By Roosevelt And Warren

San Francisco, June 6 (AP). Returns in today's primary election, from 1040 of California's 18,022 precincts gave, for Governor, Democratic ticket: Roosevelt 34,099, Warren 24,895. On the Republican side, 385 precincts gave Warren 35,557, Roosevelt 4924.

Returns from 1399 precincts gave, for United States Senator, Republican ticket: Boddy 7832, Douglas 5093, Nixon 27,172.

On the Democratic side, 1344 precincts gave: Boddy 22,035; Douglas 33,438; Nixon 9546.

Voting ranged from light to "very heavy" as Californians made primary nominations for Governor, U. S. Senator and lesser offices.

Chief interest centered on these races:

James Roosevelt, Democrat, trying to dethrone two-time Republican Governor Earl Warren—first man ever to seek California's high office a third time. The winner will be projected high into the national political spotlight.

Red-fighting Republican Representative Richard Nixon vs. Democratic Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas and Democratic publisher Manchester Boddy for the United States Senate. The race virtually was an anti-Truman GOP against two Fair Deal Democrats. Retiring Senator Sheridan Downey, Democrat, indorsed Boddy.

Under California's direct primary law, all of these and most other candidates for all offices filed on rival tickets. Nomination on both tickets today would hand the winner the office, without necessity of a November general election contest.

Warren won both nominations four years ago. Some friends were betting he would again today. The Governor was silent.

Case Defeats Gurney In So. Dakota Battle

Sioux Falls, S. Dak., June 6 (AP). Representatives Case, a veteran of 14 years in Congress today unseated United States Senator Chan Gurney in the South Dakota Republican primary.

With better than two thirds of the Republican primary vote tallied, the man who campaigned on the plea that his seniority as third ranking Republican member of the Senate should win him a return to Congress, conceded defeat at 10:45 p. m.

Gurney telephoned the Associated Press to offer his congratulations to Case and to thank his own supporters.

He declared, "Case and the other Republican nominees should receive the wholehearted support of all Republicans to assure a victory in the general election this fall."

The count from 1,349 of 1,946 South Dakota precincts gave Case 37,810; Gurney 32,778.

Supporters of Case said a light vote would be in Senator Gurney's favor. They were depending on a heavy rural vote to nominate Case, especially among the West River ranchers who have given him almost 75 percent support in the latest general elections.

The lively five-man contest for the Republican nomination for Governor wasn't expected to be settled at the polls. Unless one of the men gets at least 35 percent

Must Avert Depression, Truman Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman said last night that another business depression can be prevented—that it must be prevented, if the free world is to win the struggle against communism.

Addressing the Better Business Bureaus at a dinner in the Shoreham, Mr. Truman said the most persuasive argument the Communists have is not anything Marx or Lenin ever wrote, or anything Stalin ever did, but the depression which began in the United States in 1929.

That depression, he went on to say, weakened the faith of many men throughout the world in the ability of democratic institutions to meet the needs of the people.

Must Prevent Depression

"If we are to win the struggle between freedom and communism," the Chief Executive said, "we must be sure that we never let such a depression happen again. I believe that we can prevent it. I believe all groups in this country can move forward together in steady economic growth and progress."

Mr. Truman praised the Better Business Bureaus for what they have done to clean out the shady areas in the commercial world, and thus give real meaning to their slogan: "Private Enterprise in the Public Interest."

He recalled the "good old days," when business often was marred by fraud, false advertising, and other sharp practices, and when tycoons believed in the divine right of business in the same way that men once believed in the divine right of kings.

'All Must Work Together'

But that belief, he said, was shattered by the great depression that began in '29.

"Today," Mr. Truman continued, "people know that no single group has the right to rule the whole community. We know that all our major groups—business, agriculture and labor—must work together for the interest of all."

At the same time, he said, the country has found that action by the Government is necessary at times to help make the private enterprise system work. The President scoffed at charges that, in doing this, the Government was undermining the free enterprise system and bringing about "creeping socialism."

"Nothing could be further from the truth," he said. "The record shows that Government action in

Truman Tells About Dewey's Prosperity

In his speech to the Better Business Bureaus at the Shoreham last night, President Truman said he realized some people don't believe the policies of the Government have anything to do with the present prosperity. This reminded him of a story he heard on his cross-country trip about a venerable Republican who voted for Dewey in 1944 and 1948, and was going to vote for him again in 1952.

The old fellow, according to Mr. Truman, was asked "Why Dewey?"

"Well," he replied, "I voted for him the last two times and business has never been as good as it is today."

1.1 Billion Excise Tax Cut Held Unlikely at This Session

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday ratified a round-figure cut of 1.1 billion dollars in excise taxes only to find it may be love's labor lost.

Even while they were happily voting the last excise slash, the Senate Administration leadership suggested the tax bill may be left high and dry by a drive to adjourn.

There were these other developments in the tax merry-go-round:

After a party policy huddle, Senator Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) said he feared it would take Congress until October to enact a tax bill and it shouldn't stay here that long. Lucas said he would like to adjourn by July 31.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) predicted Congress would meet at least until mid-August but virtually ruled out any chance of a tax bill "unless the House gets it to us by July 1."

Ways and Means Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D., N. C.) said he isn't at all certain the House can pass the bill by that date but he hasn't given up hope.

Senate Republican leaders meanwhile held a party policy meeting of their own and came out swinging for an excise tax cut this session.

"I think we ought to vote some excise tax reduction before we adjourn," said Senate GOP Steering Chairman Robert A. Taft (Ohio). "I'm not sure we should cut as much as the House committee proposes, however."

Senate Republican Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) said he personally regards excise tax reduction as a Senate "must".

A caucus of all Senate Democrats was called for today to discuss with Lucas the Senate's unfinished business and how much of it can be passed before adjournment.

Lucas handed Senate Republican policy makers a tentative "worksheet," pending two-party talks on an adjournment agreement.

Wherry said Republicans generally are ready "to take up the 'musts' and get out of here as soon as possible."

Along with the big single-package appropriation bill, passed by the House but facing two or three more weeks of committee consideration before it reaches the Senate, the tax bill still loomed as a major adjournment hitch.

In stamping final approval on most previously voted excise tax reductions, the House committee yesterday nearly doubled the 655-

Pace Predicts New Weapons Will Doom Panzer Warfare

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Army Secretary Frank Pace, jr., yesterday pulled aside some of the veil that has hidden the development of new American weapons.

He said the best way to prevent the overrunning of western Europe was to put "revolutionary new weapons" in the hands of small numbers of "highly scientific ground troops."

Then, in a graduation address at West Point, he listed some of the types of weapons involved, and hinted that some, though not all, were already in the Army's hands.

He dealt first with the improvement of weapons that had already made their appearance in battle toward the end of the last war.

"I want to assure you," he said, "that the great scientific advances we made in ground weapons during World War II have been multiplied in recent years, and that we are maintaining the superiority we have long held in scientific land warfare.

"The principle of the recoilless weapon, the bazooka, and the shaped charge are being developed to a point where the mechanized panzer blitzkrieg will play a much less decisive role than it did in the last war."

The recoilless rifle, as described by Dr. Vannevar Bush in his recent book, "Modern Arms and Free Men," is powerful enough to knock out a tank although two men can carry it. The bazooka was familiar to tens of thousands of American infantrymen on many battlefields.

The "shaped charge," as Dr. Bush described it, was an explosive charge "properly shaped to focus its effect, triggered off at the right instant and in the right manner," and capable of boring through the thickest armor tanks can carry.

Pace went on to tell the West Pointers:

"Adding to these the more re-

Hundreds Facing Loss of Jobs Vainly Seek Point Four Posts

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

Hundreds of Federal workers who are threatened with the loss of their jobs are hoping to land positions with the new Point Four program.

Unfortunately for them, they'll be disappointed, as will most people who are seeking jobs in the President's program to help underdeveloped countries.

But one way or the other, Point Four will make jobs for several thousand persons. This is the way the program is being mapped out:

Headquarters of Point Four in the State Department here will have only 140 employes, and most of these jobs will be filled by people already in the department. State has slapped a "freeze" on its jobs in anticipation of a possible budget cut. It would have to make a big reduction under its House-approved budget. Some of its people cut off will be switched to Point Four.

The work in the underdeveloped areas will be done on a project basis, and financed from the Point Four appropriation. For example, State expects to contract with Agriculture to do forestry and soil conservation work in several countries. In that event, Agriculture would do its own staffing to carry out its contract. Among the other agencies that will be used in overseas projects are Public Health Service, Reclamation Bureau, Commerce and La-

"Test Run" Shows Deaths Up 7 Pct. During Holidays

A survey showed last night that the Nation's accident deaths on the current extended nonholiday weekend were running about 7 percent less than during the Memorial Day four-day holiday.

At 4 p. m. the toll for 94 hours reached 388 compared with 455 at the same hour last week. This week's count was 67 less than that in the Memorial holiday span.

The survey, conducted to provide a random nonholiday 102-hour weekend accident toll comparison with that of the Memorial Day weekend, was begun at 6 p. m. Friday and will include violent deaths occurring through midnight Tuesday.

As the check period went into its final eight hours, the number of traffic deaths reached 237 — 53 fewer than the 290 for the corresponding holiday hour.

Sixty-three drownings were reported against 67 during the holiday weekend. Miscellaneous otner mishaps took 88 lives in the current period, 98 a week ago.

Senator Says State Dept. Has 3 Branded Soviet Agents in '46

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) told his Senate colleagues yesterday that a minimum of three persons tagged as Soviet "agents" by the FBI four years ago are still in the State Department.

He said he knew their names and that the individuals were still holding high position.

Last night the State Department said McCarthy's statement was "absolutely false."

McCarthy's new information, he indicated, came from a 1946 document prepared by a State Department investigator who made reference to an FBI "chart" of categories of "Communist agents, Communists, Communist sympathizers and suspects" in the State Department as of May 15, 1946.

Photostats Released

McCarthy made public photostats of two pages of the report, which summarized the alleged FBI tabulation as showing that on that date the totals were:

Agents	20
Communists	13
Sympathizers	14
Suspects	77

The State Department's comment on McCarthy's newest deluge of numbers of alleged subversives in its ranks read in part:

"The Senator based his charge upon the completely erroneous belief that the FBI prepared a chart referred to in the photostatic document which purportedly evaluated departmental personnel in terms of 'agents,' 'Communists,' 'sympathizers' and 'suspects.'

Witch-Hunt Tactics Assailed By St. Laurent in U. S. Talk

St. Louis, June 6 (Spl.).—Prime Minister Louis S. St. Laurent of Canada warned an American audience here today against "witch-hunt" tactics in rooting out communism.

To attack the loyalty of a public official without "substantial" proof, he said, was simply to play the Communist game.

"Surely the most effective weapon against Communist infiltration on this continent" he said, "is not the spread of fear and suspicion, but the confident practice of democracy and freedom and justice."

St. Laurent, a leading Catholic layman of Canada, spoke after getting an honorary degree from St. Louis University, a Jesuit institution here.

He was a member of the Canadian cabinet that exposed and broke the Communist spy ring in 1946.

He said no free nation could afford to neglect "any proper precaution to find the secret Communist agents who are in a position to do harm to the Nation's security."

"But," he went on, "the existence of these conspiratorial forces in our free society poses a very grave problem for us all. I was much struck the other day by an editorial in a great American paper which put the problem in the form of this simple question:

" 'Why not use any methods to fight it, then, if the danger is so real? Why not use the most thoroughgoing purge or witch-hunt? Ought we not to consider Problem Has Other Angles Out of Hands Of Military

Disqualifies Self As an Advocate But Thinks Idea Has Little Danger

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. Omar Bradley told Congress yesterday that, considered "from a strictly military point of view," the rearming of Western Germany would strengthen the security of the Western World.

Testifying in support of the new $1,222,500,000 military aid program, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff also said that he saw little danger of the Germans turning coat and siding with the Russians if given American arms.

The legislation does not include Western Germany in the North Atlantic military aid pact and Bradley did not advocate such a course.

But under questioning by Representative Jacob Javits (R. Lib., N. Y.), he gave some direct answers setting forth his own views on this highly controversial question. Should we remilitarize Germany?" asked Javits.

"From a strictly military point of view," replied the Nation's top officer, "I believe the defenses of western Europe would be strengthened by including Germany or such part of it as we control. It has large production facilities and resources and we know very well the caliber of their soldiers, airmen and sailors."

Political, Other Considerations

Asked if he recommended such a course, Bradley replied that there are "political and other considerations" entering into the problem that are "out of military hands" and which he was not qualified to weigh.

Wouldn't a rearmed Germany be apt to "become a Frankenstein and destroy us" by joining up with Russia as Hitler did in 1939? demanded Javits.

Bradley replied that this would be one of the chances we'd have to take if we moved in this direction and that he didn't think it was much of a chance the way the Germans "feel about communism."

Javits recalled that Secretary of State Dean Acheson had testified earlier that there are no plans for including Germany in the military aid program. Bradley agreed that this was so.

Representative Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.) chimed in that he hoped top Administration officials would take into account that Germany is the strongest nation potentially in western Europe and would approach the rearmament problem "cold-bloodedly" and "not be swayed by emotion."

Testifies Twice

Bradley testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee in open session and then appeared

Swimmer Swept Over Dam Saved At Little Falls

A Washington newspaperman and a member of the Glen Echo Rescue Squad were hurt last night in the rescue of a Washington man who hung for three hours on the rocks above Little Falls in the Potomac.

Finally three youths waded out in the current to feed a line to the trapped man, identified as Joe Todt, 26, of 65 M st. nw.

According to Capt. George B. Arnold of the Glen Echo Fire Department, Todt was swimming when he was washed over the dam at Brookmont. He slithered 15 feet down the dam and 25 feet downstream before he grasped a jutting rock.

Robert Griemel, Charles Robey and "Bobo" Blanchford, all of Brookmont, accomplished the rescue.

Harry Lever, a reporter for the Evening Star, fell into the water, William Lochte of the Glen Echo Rescue Squad, jumped in and pulled him out. Both suffered scraped chests.

Habeas Corpus Right Denied Enemy Alien

The status of aliens who come under American military or civilian jurisdiction overseas has been clarified in a Supreme Court decision handed down on the final day of the court's 1949-50 term.

The ruling was buried in the blitz of Monday's activity despite its importance.

Speaking for a majority in a 6-to-3 split of the court, Justice Jackson ruled that an enemy alien has no right to the ancient privilege of the writ of habeas corpus when he is outside the territory of the United States. The ruling appeared also to cover any alien, but it did not apply to American citizens abroad.

Justice Black, for the minority (in which he was joined by Justices Douglas and Burton) contended that the writ should be available to all persons "coming within the ambit of our power." The writ is a means of liberating persons illegally imprisoned. The Latin words "habeas corpus" mean "you have the body" and they are used as an order by a court to a jailer to bring a prisoner to the bar.

Germans In Japan

The particular case decided on Monday concerned Lothar Eisentrager and a number of other Germans who had been tried and convicted by an American military tribunal in China of aiding the Japanese there after the surrender of Germany but before the surrender of Japan. They asked the District Court here for habeas corpus writs, naming Secretary of Defense Johnson as the defendant, since the Government is situated here.

Jackson declared that " nothing in the text of the Constitution extends such a right nor does anything in our statutes." Judge E. Barrett Prettyman, for the Court of Appeals, last April had held that such a right did exist, but he was reversed by the high court ruling.

Jackson noted that aliens in this country have gradually been given many of the rights of citizens under the Constitution but he drew a distinction between resident aliens and those physically outside the country. As to an enemy alien, Jackson said he was bound by an allegiance which commits him to lose no opportunity to forward the cause of our enemy." He painted a picture of serious injury to military leadership if enemy aliens were permitted to come into the American courts during time of war.

Black read Jackson's opinion to mean that "no American court can even consider the jurisdiction of the military tribunal to convict and sentence these prisoners for the alleged crime." He said the new doctrine was "wholly indefensible" if it deprives all Federal courts "of their power to protect against a Federal executive's illegal incarcerations." At another point he called the Jackson ruling "a broad and dangerous precedent."

Black said some nations may find merit in "leaving the administration of criminal laws to executive and military agencies completely free from judicial scrutiny" but that he "would hold that our courts can exercise it (the habeas corpus writ) whenever any United States official illegally imprisons any person in any land we govern."

"Our constitutional principles," said Black, "are such that their mandate of equal justice under law should be applied as well when we occupy lands across the sea as when our flag flew over 13 colonies."

Jackson was careful in his majority opinion to note that the question of the rights of citizens abroad was "untouched by this decision." Those rights, however, are unclear as of today. As Black noted, the Justice Department, in arguing the case of the Germans, contended that the habeas corpus writ is not available to American citizens convicted and imprisoned in Germany by American military tribunals. Black stated:

Rejection Made Difficult

"Wile the court wisely disclaims any such necessary effect for its holding, rejection of the Government's argument is certainly made difficult by the logic of today's opinion. Conceivably a majority may hereafter find citizenship a sufficient substitute for territorial jurisdiction and thus permit courts to protect Americans from illegal sentences.

"But the court's opinion inescapably denies courts power to afford the least bit of protection for any alien who is subject to our occupation government abroad, even if he is neither enemy nor belligerent and even after peace is officially declared."

The question of rights of American citizens in our zones of occupation abroad is likely to be the subject of later Supreme Court rulings—especially their right to the habeas corpus writ now denied the alien.

In our zone of Germany, for example, there is now functioning a court system set up first by the American military and now under control of the civilian high commissioner. The American zone is divided into 11 judicial districts with a Court of Appeals, the latter staffed by former judges of American courts.

Court Setup Challenged

But this court system, for example, denies trial by jury to American civilians on the theory that such a right is limited to the territorial United States. In one case now in litigation an American, Robert M. Donihi, arrested on a simple speeding charge, is challenging the court setup. He notes that the Constitution gives Congress power to set up courts, but that these courts are creatures of the executive branch of the Government.

An allied issue is the right of a person connected with the military —an Army dependent, for example. In Germany, military court jurisdiction has now been limited to military personnel alone, presumably subjecting other Americans to the new court setup there. One case that attempted to question the court's handling of Army dependents was that of Mrs. Yvette Madson, a Brooklyn mother convicted in Germany of killing her Army lieutenant husband. The Supreme Court on Monday refused to consider her case.

It may be that after the Supreme Court has hammered out some further decisions on the problem of how far the Constitution follows the Flag, the Congress will bave to write some new legislation to meet situations that even the wisest of our founding fathers apparently failed to anticipate.

Railroads Serving South Will Obey Decision

Railroads serving the South indicated yesterday they would comply with the unanimous Supreme Court decision ordering an end to segregation on dining cars.

A spokesman for the Southern, the line involved in the legal case, said: "We must await the further order" of the Interstate Commerce Commission. This may take a month or so. The railroad said it would "of course comply with whatever order is ultimately entered by the ICC."

This statement noted that the ruling applied only to interstate passengers. A Chesapeake & Ohio spokesman likewise made that point, declaring that Negroes traveling from one point to another in a State that has segregation laws will be segregated.

A Seaboard spokesman said that "if the law stops segregating Negroes, then we'll do it." The president of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis said his trains soon will begin complying with the new ruling.

Duplicate Facilities to Keep Segregation at Maryland U.

President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland last night said the school would provide "duplicate" facilities for Negroes to maintain segregation, in line with Monday's Supreme Court decisions.

The university is the defendant in six lawsuits brought by Negroes seeking admission to various branches, both in Baltimore and at College Park. Negroes now are admitted only to the law school at Baltimore, after a court issued an order to admit them.

Byrd said the segregation decisions in the Texas and Oklahoma state university cases "leaves us about where we were." He said, "We've got to take them into existing schools or offer duplicate schools." He said the state would do the latter because segregation is a State policy.

Byrd said that, for example, plans had been made for a Negro engineering school and that "if necessary, it will be ready this fall."

Negro In Nursing School

The Maryland Court of Appeals in April ordered the university to admit a Negro girl to its nursing school in line with earlier Supreme Court decisions, now reinforced by the new rulings. Byrd said the university regents had been waiting for the new decisions before deciding whether to appeal the nursing case. Neither he nor Attorney General Hall Hammond would comment yesterday on whether an appeal would be taken.

Schools involved in segregation suits are pharmacy and dentistry at Baltimore and engineering and home economics at College Park.

At the Capitol, Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) commented that it would be "hard to confine" the two new rulings to graduate schools, though they were the only ones directly affected. He said the "same principles would apply to grade schools, or to swimming pools."

In Texas, university officials said the ruling in their case would be observed and the Negro involved, Heman Marion Sweatt, said:

"I shall most certainly enroll in the university in September and without malice."

Will Fight Oil Decision

Attorney General Price Daniel said, however, that the State would fight the tidelands oil decision, also unfavorable to Texas. He said that fight "has just begun."

Dr. George L. Cross, president of the University of Oklahoma, said the decision in the case of G. W. McLaurin "apparently knocks out all segregation in graduate schools at Oklahoma University." He also said he did not expect any great influx of Negro students as a result.

The one certain result of the two unanimous rulings knocking down graduate school segregation appears to be a flood of new lawsuits attempting to widen the doctrine.

One question unanswered is the effect of the rulings on the compact between Southern State lacking facilities for Negro university students to send them out of the State to Negro schools. Chairman Millard Caldwell of the Board of Control for Southern Regional Education said the ruling would have no effect on that program. He is a former Florida Governor.

Kentucky Law Relaxed

One State that may not have much of a problem is Kentucky. It recently relaxed its law that since 1904 had enforced segregation in the State's coleges.

In South Carolina, Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, 1948 Dixiecrat candidate for President and now running for the Senate, said the segregation decisions "are the fruits of the campaign President Truman and his cohorts have been waging against the South for many months . . . It is apparent that they are a part of the effort to destroy States' rights in this country."

In Atlanta, Ku Klux Klan leader Sam Roper said the decisions would lead to "serious trouble" in the South. He said the court's rulings violated States' rights and also that "The people are not prepared politically or spiritually to accept such an interpretation of our American Constitution."

In New York, it was announced that more than 40 attorneys for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People from all over the nation would meet June 26-27 to plan strategy and "decide where we go from here."

Texas, Louisiana See Court Rule as 'Theft'

Texas Congressmen yesterday denounced as "cold-blooded theft" the Supreme Court's ruling that the Federal Government owns the oil-rich tidelands along the Gulf Coast.

They promised a never-ending fight to overturn the decision and give the States title to the areas along their shores.

Protests were voiced by Representatives Ed Gossett and Wingate H. Lucas, Democrats, and Representative Ben Guill, the only Texas Republican in Congress.

Guill, in his maiden speech, said the ruling is a "reward for the displaced loyalties" for normally Democratic Texas.

"It was a legalized, cold-blooded theft of close to one billion dollars and picks the pockets of Texas school children," he protested. "The decision was an aggressive step against the State of Texas."

Lucas said it was "part of a scheme that will rob every State." Gossett said an attempt will be made in this session of Congress to pass State tidelands legislation. If it fails, he said, another effort will be made next year.

Similar sentiments were expressed by Louisiana House members regarding the Louisiana decision.

about the same time he was sighted.

All survivors were reported "in good condition."

Halsey said one engine of the converted C-46 type plane "unexpectedly failed due to mechanical trouble and the second engine then began to lose oil pressure, causing failure."

This amplified the Laconic message sent at 11:06 (EDT) last night. He said the plane was flying at about 200 feet and losing altitude rapidly.

"It looks like I'm going in the drink," he messaged.

Other searchers also were doubtful other passengers would be found alive.

The Saufley radioed Coast Guard headquarters in Miami that only two life jackets were found during a thorough search, extending as far as the Windward and Leeward Islands.

Seas were reported choppy and "prospects of further recoveries are doubtful," the destroyer reported.

Flying to U. S. Harvests

The migratory workers aboard were among more than 5000 being flown from Puerto Rico to the United States to help in crop harvests.

Irving H. Mansfield, of Millville, N. J., treasurer of Westair Co., said "we had planeloads yesterday going both to Michigan and New Jersey for agricultural harvests, but it is my understanding this group was going to Michigan."

The Civil Aeronautics Board in Washington said Gordon Matthews, assistant chief of its accident investigation branch, was flying to San Juan to begin an immediate investigation.

The converted C-46 plane was the same type as that which went into the Atlantic June 7, 1949, a few minutes after taking off from San Juan for Miami. A total of 53 persons were killed.

The disaster was the fourth in 2¼ years in this area involving large numbers of passengers.

First Infantry Division Men Return to Omaha Beach

Omaha Beach, Normandy, June 6 (AP).—Sixteen officers and men of the United States First Infantry Division returned to Omaha Beach today. It was the sixth anniversary of D-Day.

Wearing the big red "1" insignia, they placed a wreath on the marble monument at the top of the bluff that bears the names of 500 fallen comrades, then trooped through weeds and clover to the American military cemetery where 9321 soldiers, sailors and airmen are buried on a slope facing the sea.

Battered, rusting landing craft and freighters still litter the beach where children play on sunny afternoons. The fleet of ships sunk bow to stern for 300 yards to make a breakwater still forms an unbroken line.

A sign over the road to the beach says, "110,000 soldiers and 20,000 vehicles debarked on this beach from June 6 to June 20, 1944."

Local French officials also held commemorative services at Utah Beach and other landing places along Normandy's coast. French and American flags floated side by side at nearly every house in the region.

The American group was led by Maj. John Finke of New York City, who made the assault on D-Day.

U. N. Peak Climb Planned

Lake Success, June 6 (NYHT).—A Norwegian expedition will attempt to climb 25,263-foot high Tirch Mir in the Pakistan next month, and if successful will plant the United Nations flag beside the Norwegian emblem atop the peak, according to a U. N. dispatch from Karachi, Pakistan.

TV in California Buses

Los Angeles, June 6 (AP).—Television sets have been installed in buses on a Los Angeles-San Francisco line. The set is mounted at the front where everyone can see the screen but the driver.

Draft Questionnaire To Drop Race Query

Representative Klein (D., N. Y.) yesterday said future selective service questionnaires will not require registrants to state their race.

Selective service officials decided to drop that question, Klein said in a statement, after he had protested against it. He said it will not be asked after the present stock of questionnaires is exhausted.

Lie Submits Plan To U.N. Members

Within U.N.

11 on 'Hill' Ask Parley On Disarming

Seven Senators and four Representatives proposed yesterday that the United Nations call an immediate disarmament conference.

The 11 lawmakers offered a resolution that would pledge the United States to turn over to the U. N. for peace developments the funds that would be saved in the next five years by any workable disarmament agreement.

Asserting that "the prospect of the hydrogen bomb propels the peoples of the earth into danger above and beyond anything heretofore conceived by man," the resolution asked for a peace crusade.

Signers were Senators McMahon (D., Conn.), Magnuson (D., Wash.), Fullbright (D., Ark.), Morse (R., Ore.), Sparkman (D., Ala.), Gillette (D., Iowa), and Hendrickson (R., N. J.) and Representatives Price (D., Ill.), Henry Jackson (D., Wash.), Eaton (R., N. J. and Cole (R., N. Y.).

"We resolutely oppose any sign of American weakness and any slackening of our Nation's firm determination to keep strong so long as the arms race continues," they said. "We just as resolutely advocate the most strenuous efforts to secure those effective safeguards which will halt the arms race and harness nature's forces solely for human welfare."

If effective controls can be established for all kinds of armaments, including atomic, biological and chemical, the group proposed in its resolution that each nation turn over to the U. N. "all sums which otherwise would have been spent on weapons for a period of five years."

Lake Success, June 6 (NYHT). Secretary General Trygve Lie told each United Nations member today, in effect, that until Communist China is admitted to the U. N., "no significant progress can be made" to minimize the cold war, bring the Russians back into the U. N., and reopen "genuine negotiations" on Russian-Western problems.

Also, in a letter to the 59 U. N. members, Lie revealed that last month he submitted to government heads in Washington, London, Moscow and Paris a 10-point plan designed by him to reactivate all aspects of the U. N., and to bring the hostile East-West camps back into "genuine negotiation—not in a spirit of appeasement—but with enlightened self-interest and common sense on all sides."

While Lie pinned all hopes of a first development on admission of the Chinese Communists, there appeared today to be absolutely no prospect of a change of attitude and vote by any of those Security Council members—the United States, France, Ecuador, Egypt and Cuba—whose position so far blocks admission of the Peiping regime.

Lie said he contemplated the possibility of submitting his 10-point plan to the Security Council "at an appropriate time." And, he added, he reserved his right also to place it on the agenda of the General Assembly, opening here in September.

Ex-Captive in China Reenlists in Marines

Los Angeles, June 6 (U.P.).—M/Sergt. Elmer Bender, a prisoner of the Chinese Communists for 19 months, has reenlisted in the Marines.

Bender, formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio, recently was freed by the Chinese Reds with Navy Electrician William C. Smith, Long Beach, Calif. Bender's last enlistment ended six months ago while he was a prisoner.

The Marine Sergeant, now assigned to the Marine air station at El Toro, Calif., said he and Smith are writing the story of the 19-month imprisonment.

Foose said he hoped to get the restaurant, a favorite spot for tourists, back in operation in a week

Japan Purges Top Reds on Order of U. S.

Tokyo, June 6 (AP).—The Japanese government today purged from public life the brains of Japan's Communist Party. General MacArthur called the signals.

The Reds took the banning of all 24 Politburo members meekly. There was no call for strikes or demonstrations in retaliation. They apparently feared further violence would speed threatened outlawing of the party. The government on Sunday said this was coming as a result of attacks on five American soldiers at a Red rally on Memorial Day.

MacArthur ordered the ban of the 24 Red leaders in a letter to Prime Minister Shigeru Yoshida yesterday. Yoshida summoned his cabinet into extraordinary session. It immediately put the ban into effect.

The Communists issued a mild statement asking "all patriots" to join in resisting this "suppression." But the party called for no specific action.

The Reds blamed their plight on the "reactionary Yoshida cabinet." They did not mention MacArthur or the occupation.

The ban will remove the Communists' most effective leaders and best public speakers from open political activity. They are prohibited from party membership—and technically from any guidance of party affairs or writing, although this cannot be enforced.

Seven must give up seats in the Diet. This will reduce the Reds to 34 seats out of 716 in parliament.

Nationalists Deny Shelling British Ship

Hongkong, June 6 (U.P.)—The Nationalists today officially denied they had shelled the British blockade runner Cheung Hing off Amoy and said eight Chinese aboard had been killed by Communist shore batteries.

The Cheung Hing arrived in Hongkong today with gaping holes in the sides, and the captain, James G. Skinner, reported a Chinese warship opened fire without warning while his ship was outside the three-mile limit early Monday.

Skinner said his vessel, which had just left Amoy with 180 passengers, suffered three or four direct hits.

Nationalist Chief of Staff Chou Chi-jou announced on Formosa that a gunboat attempted to halt the Cheung Hing before Sunday with a burst of machine-gun fire over the bow while the ship was cruising without running lights off Communist-held Wusu Island.

He said the Communists apparently mistook the British vessel for a Nationalist gunboat and laid down a heavy barrage of 3-inch shells. Chou said the Nationalist gunboat was not equipped with "anything like 3-inchers."

Bingham Quits ECA, Parkman Succeeds to Job

The Economic Cooperation Administration yesterday announced the resignation of Barry Bingham, Louisville newspaper executive, as chief of Marshall Plan activities in France.

The agency said Bingham plans to return to his duties as president and publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times after more than a year with ECA in Paris.

Henry Parkman, Boston lawyer, was named to succeed Bingham.

Parkman served as a military government adviser during World War II and held the rank of brigadier general. He also was an Army officer in the First World War.

ECA said that B. E. L. Timmons, who has been Bingham's deputy, will serve as acting chief of the ECA-Paris mission until Parkman takes over August 1. Bingham is slated to return to this country in about 10 days, ECA said.

Refugee Bill Extension Passes House

The House yesterday passed without debate a compromise bill extending the Displaced Persons Act for another year and permitting more refugees to enter this country.

The bill has not yet been acted on by the Senate. Its conferees have agreed to the compromise, reached after both branches of Congress had passed separate bills.

The legislation would extend for a year beyond June 30 a 1948 law that provided for the entry of 205,000 displaced persons. It raises the limit to 341,000. More than 150,000 already have been admitted.

The legislation also would permit 5000 adopted children, 54,744 persons of German ancestry expelled from eastern Europe, and up to 15,000 refugees here on temporary visas to make their home in this country.

Indo-China War Stepped Up

Saigon, June 6 (AP).—The attempted assassination of a cabinet member moved former Emperor Bao Dai's Viet Nam state today to embark on total war against Ho Chi-minh's guerillas.

The wounded Education Minister, Vuong Quang Nhuong, had been secretly negotiating in efforts to swing Nationalist factions in Indo-China over to Bao Dai's French-sponsored government by political persuasion.

Vuong was reported in critical condition from three bullet wounds he received yesterday. The assassin escaped.

The new crackdown, it is reported, includes imprisonment without trial for known underground terrorists and emphasis on creation of a National Viet Namese army to fight with the French and Foreign Legion against Ho's forces.

The authoritarian policy is an acknowledgment of Viet Nam failure to woo some nationalistic factions with arguments that under Ho they are fighting for Moscow communism instead of Nationalism.

Official French sources said the new policy marks the beginning of a new phase of the Indo-China fighting.

Persons charged with subversive political activity will be sent to concentration camps by executive order, it was reported.

The first emergency measure put into effect by Bao Dai has clamped censorship on the French-language Viet Namese press. The Nationalistic Viet Namese press has criticized the Bao Dai government and some sections are clearly on this side of Ho.

Coroner Probes Death of Woman Found in Tub

A certificate on the cause of death of Mrs. Carrie Kurtz, 63, found unconscious in a water-filled tub Monday, will be withheld pending results of a chemical analysis, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said yesterday.

Mrs. Kurtz was found unconscious by her daughter, Mrs. Douglas Spradling, with whom she lived at 412 Mellon st. se.

After performing an autopsy yesterday, Dr. MacDonald said he would withhold a certificate until it can be determined if the woman, who had been in ill health, died of drowning.

Witch-Hunt Warning Is Given

one scalp worth the incidental persecution of 10 innocents?"

"And the editorial then proceeded to answer its own question in these words: 'That course, this newspaper submits, would be burning down the house of the American way of life in order to get at the rats in it. That is the way to do the work of the fifth column and to advance the aim of its Kremlin masters rather than to destroy it . . .'

"I believe that statement is profoundly true."

[St. Laurent was quoting from an editorial of The Washington Post, "The Road Back to America," published May 22.—Editor's note.]

"One of the greatest dangers in any struggle with an unscrupulous enemy, as every practicing Christian knows, is the danger of descending to the same methods and weapons, and thereby bringing oneself down to his level," the Prime Minister continued.

"If we are to preserve civilization, we must first remain civilized; if we are to preserve freedom, we must allow others to remain free.

"It is obvious that expert police action is necessary in order to detect the secret agents of Communist aggression and render them harmless. But . . . while all of us should be vigilant to protect our institutions, police action to detect the secret agents of potential enemies is not going to be made more efficient, and will often be hampered, by too much publicity.

"What is even worse, the spreading of alarming reports about the prevalence of Communist agents is bound to create fear and suspicion in many honest minds. And unwarranted fear and suspicion weaken the unity and strength of any community . . .

"I believe it is essential to the effective operation of free and representative political institutions that there should be public confidence in the good faith and honest intentions of those who are chosen by the people for high office and responsibility.

"We do not have to believe in the wisdom of all their policies; and one of the most important of all democratic freedoms is the freedom to oppose the policies of the administration in office.

"But it is quite another thing to attack the goad faith, the honesty of purpose and the loyalty to their country of public men, when there is no substantial evidence to support such attacks.

"It seems to me that one of the most effective ways to help the enemies of freedom to undermine and weaken our democratic institutions is to indulge in sustained and unwarranted attacks upon the characters of public men."

The real menace of Communism does not come from "the tiny Communist minority within North America," he said, but from "the spread of Soviet imperialism through Communist infiltration in other less rappy continents."

The Prime Minister expressed the "deep conviction" that in their foreign policies President Truman, General Marshall and Secretary Acheson "have given leadership to the whole civilized world, and maintained hope in the hearts of millions who were close to despair." He also praised the work of Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) and Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) in leading the bipartisan support of American foreign policy.

"Without the leadership the United States has given since the war," he said, "it is hard to see how the cause of civilization could have been sustained."

VFW Protest 'Pains' Truman

All the fuss about what organizations a fellow belongs to is giving President Truman a pain in the neck. He has joined some himself that he wishes he hadn't, but it hasn't hurt him any.

That is what the President told Clyde A. Lewis, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars when Lewies recently protested one of the President's appointments. Mr. Truman said also he wishes veterans would quit knocking public officials and start helping them.

Lewis, in a letter dated May 25, attacked Thomas K. Finletter, new Secretary of the Air Force, for his association with United World Federalists, Inc. He called Finletter "an avowed disciple of world government."

Mr. Truman replied that Finletter was the best possible man for the job. As for Finletter's connection with World Federalists, the President wrote:

"All this howl about organizations a fellow belongs to gives me a pain in the neck. I'd be willing to bet my right eye that you yourself and I have joined some organizations that we wish we hadn't. It hasn't hurt me any and I don't think it has hurt you any."

Mr. Truman did not name any groups he wishes he had not joined. He belongs to the VFW.

Finletter, a New York lawyer, quit as a member of the World Federalists executive council in May, 1948, when he joined the Government as a foreign aid mission chief in London.

He said it was "rather disturbing" that Finletter should head "a most important and strategic branch of our armed forces." He called on the new Secretary either to resign from the Air Force or to publicly quit the World Federalists.

Pace Sees New Weapons Dooming Tanks

cent developments with regard to guided missiles and rockets, target-seeking equipment, and the possibilities of tactical use of atomic weapons, it may well be that tank warfare as we have known it will soon be obsolete."

Collins' Address Recalled

Last Sunday Gen. J. Lawton Collins, the Army Chief of Staff, officially disclosed what he called the "possible" use of atomic warheads on missiles fired by artillery. On Monday, Secretaries Johnson and Acheson told congressional committees of the importance of new weapons in defending Europe, but did not name particular types.

Pace cautioned the West Pointers that "These new weapons I speak of are not all in the hands of our troops today."

"They are definitely weapons of the future, but we hope the not-too-distant future," he said. "I mention them only to remind you that you are joining a highly technical, highly scientific Army which is fully aware of the need to place ever-increasing emphasis upon scientific research and development.

"Modern warfare requires a marriage of all the technical specialties and all the learned professions. As members of the Army you will have to perfect yourselves in its highly technical specialties.

"But your responsibility is greater than that, for you also must be generalists who can weld together all the contributing factors and specialties which make up modern warfare.

"Unconventional Techniques"

"You not only must master the weapons and techniques at your immediate disposal, but also the more unconventional techniques, such as psychological warfare, chemical, biological and radiological warfare, and other new developments as they arise, relating all of them to the powerful economy and the great industrial potential which have been, and remain, our most powerful weapon of defense and offense.

"In brief, you will have failed to meet the challenge of your profession if you fail to learn the potentialities of all these fields and how their end-products can be welded together to insure victory on the ground battlefield by small numbers of superior technicians faced by large numbers of more conventional land forces."

Earlier in his speech Pace had said the Army "not only is outnumbered tremendously by the ground forces of our most dangerous antagonist but is also at a disadvantage qualitatively in certain categories of equipment, most notably in tanks."

"Furthermore," he said, "we and our Allies can never hope to compete with our potential enemies in numbers and masses of ground troops and weapons of a conventional type.

Depend on Research

"It is therefore obvious that we in the Army must depend to a great extent upon intensive scientific research and development, directed at equipping our ground forces and the ground forces of our Allies with such advanced and superior weapons that they can overcome the overwhelming numerical advantage of our potential enemies."

Pace Speech on "Voice"

The Voice of America broadcasts gave heavy play to the Pace speech yesterday, and also to the statements on the same subject by Secretaries Acheson and Johnson the previous day.

To Russia and the satellite nations, the broadcasts stressed that the new weapons were defensive in character, intended solely to make any attack on western Europe too costly to succeed.

To western Europe, too, the broadcasts emphasized the defensive nature of the weapons, but sought also to give reassurance and to show that vast ground armies would not be needed.

behind closed doors in the afternoon at a joint session of the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees.

W. Averell Harriman, Ambassador-at-Large in western Europe, also testified before the same groups in support of the second installment of the arms aid program, alternating with Bradley in the morning and afternoon sessions.

Presenting an optimistic picture of the economic and military program made by the North Atlantic Pact countries, Harriman urged approval of an Administration proposal to give more arms production facilities to western Europe. The present law bars us from building or equipping any munitions plants in Europe, other than giving machine tools.

Program Restricted

This has "seriously restricted" the program, he declared.

However, it appeared yesterday that there will be opposition to this phase of the new bill.

Representative Walter Judd (R., Minn.) hit the plan as a potential "boondoggle" and told the committee he understands officials are divided on its need.

A top-ranking officer concerned with the military aid program came to him, urging that this be cut from the Administration bill, Judd stated. Plans for this phase of the program are not complete, he said he was advised. Harriman said he was advised. Harriman said other Administration officials would present complete details later this week.

Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee also wanted to know more about plans for arms production help to western Europe, indicating some additional restrictions may be necessary.

Members of the House committee also questioned Harriman closely about the Schuman plan to pool western Europe's coal and steel, and talked of withholding American funds for expanding production in the Ruhr until Britain joins in the plan.

Advises Against Pressure

Harriman strongly advised "such economic pressure" and said he is confident the United Kingdom eventually will take part "in some way."

In his prepared statement, Bradley said that the progress of the past year shows that "our collective security plans" when fully implemented, can bring "reasonable security."

"A year ago," he declared, "the successful defense of western Europe, in the face of a coordinated enemy attack, was a remote possibility. The military estimates were discouraging.

"But now it appears possible that these European nations, with the help that the United States has given them, and the strength derived from our collective security planning, will—if given time—be able to defend and hold western Europe, if our present rate of progress continues."

He added that this estimate includes America's "total effort" if war comes. Under questioning, Bradley said that today the forces are not adequate to stop Russian aggression, though they do provide a deterrent.

"I do not think there is any immediate threat of war," he said. "But at the same time, I think war may come either by accident or design, although I think the chances are against it at present."

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs, pressed for an opinion as to "who is winning the cold war," said he thought it a standoff to date. He declined to give any estimate as to how long the military aid program would be required or how much will be required.

No Soap for Hope Says Lever Firm; Option Dropped

New York, June 6 (AP). — Comedian Bob Hope and his radio sponsor, Lever Brothers Co., came to a parting of the ways today after months of differences over his Tuesday night show on NBC.

Lever said it was not renewing its option on Hope's services or on the network time for his show, which goes off the air for the Summer after the June 13 broadcast.

At the same time, the company disclosed it had arranged to sponsor 15 minutes of the Arthur Godfrey five-a-week morning radio show on CBS starting October 1.

The sponsor and Hope are known to have disagreed on whether the radio show should be recorded in advance on tape. Hope wanted to do so, but the company insisted on live performances.

Lobby Witnesses Are Threatened

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

A stormy, politics-ridden session of the House Special Committee on Lobbying adjourned yesterday with threats of a possible contempt citation against two witnesses.

These were Edward A. Rumely, executive secretary of the Committee for Constitutional Government, and Joseph P. Kamp, vice chairman of the Constitutional Educational League.

The third witness was Merwin K. Hart, president of the National Economic Council, who turned over the information sought by the committee under subpena. He insisted upon handing it personally to Chairman Frank Buchanan (D., Pa.,) warning that he feared it might fall into the hands of "enemies of American liberty."

Rumely contended the investigating group had no constitutional right to data concerning book sales by his group, or loans for promoting the publishing of his books.

Rumely's committee has filed a suit in Federal District Court here asking permission to withhold some of the material sought in the lobby group's subpena.

Kamp told the committee that he had not had time to assemble the material sought by the group. He also served notice that he would not furnish such information, mainly the list of his financial backers, unless he is convinced the activities his group come under the jurisdiction of House investigators.

Kamp was icily "excused" by Representative Henderson Lanham (D., Ga.) when he announced his unwillingness to furnish the material sought.

Buchanan called for a closed-door session of the group next week to decide whether or not any contempt citations should be issued.

Representative Carl Albert (D., Okla.) issued a statement saying that Kamp's and Rumley's "techniques" of invoking the constitution to "avoid" disclosures to a congressional committee showed such a technique was one not employed only by Communists.

Rumely insisted that the committee's request for names of purchasers of his group's literature poses two problems—first that publication of the list might be used to "smear" purchasers and second the physical problem of getting together lists of thousands of subscribers.

Rumely said that for example, the Federal Bureau of Investigation has purchased 350 copies of his organization's publication, "The Constitution of the United States" by Thomas James Norton, for the purpose of educating its agents. This could hardly be for "lobbying use" Rumely maintained. Norton's book on the Constitution is generally considered a standard reference work.

The whole session was marked by sharp intracommittee bickering, with Lanham and Representative Clarence Brown (R., Ohio) shouting accusations of making "stump speeches" at each other.

The accusations started flying when Brown warned the committee was coming close to jeopardizing freedom of the press when it sought lists of books and publication subscribers.

Lanham countered by reading from the record that Brown himself had asked just such information from the CIO in connection with distribution of pamphlets on housing legislation.

Kamp, whose Constitutional Educational League is not registered as a lobbying group, is under a four-month jail sentence for refusing to produce his records for a House Elections Investigation Committee in 1944.

Rumely was cited by the same committee but his first trial resulted in a mistrial. He was tried again in 1946 and acquitted. He was sent to prison after World War I for violating the Trading With the Enemy Act but was pardoned by President Coolidge after serving 30 days.

Meanwhile, in the House yesterday Representative Clare Hoffman (R., Mich.) introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of the staff of the lobbying committee.

For Three Years

Gen. Marshall Renamed to Red Cross

President Truman has reappointed General George C. Marshall as president of the American Red Cross for a three-year term.

Gen. Marshall

General Marshall was appointed last October 1 to succeed Basil O'Connor, who resigned. He formally assumed his duties on October 4.

At the same time, President Truman announced reappointment of all but one of the seven other members of the Red Cross board of governors.

On the recommendation of General Marshall, Interior Secretary Oscar L. Chapman will replace Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer on the board. General Marshall pointed out the Initerior Department's concern with floods and Indian affairs brought its Secretary into closer touch with disasters and other Red Cross problems.

Reappointed for three year terms were Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, Undersecretary of the Treasury Edward H. Foley, jr., Assistant Secretary of State Willard L. Thorp, Rear Admiral Clifford A. Swanson, surgeon general of the Navy; Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, surgeon general of the Army, and Deputy Secretary of Defense Stephen T. Early.

Cherner Tells of $50,000 Ford Gift to UJA

Henry Ford, 2d. the auto manufacturer, contributed $50,000, as well as a stirring address, to the United Jewish Appeal, Joseph Cherner, Washington businessman and UJA official, reported yesterday.

Ford, in addressing a recent meeting in Los Angeles of the motion picture industry division of UJA said that the appeal is "not alone a matter of helping Jewish men, women and children who desperately need help.

"It is of equal importance that we Americans—whatever our faith or racial backgrounds—continue to maintain our great tradition of asylum, of aid to the suffering and persecuted, of support for democratic movements wherever they may be found.

"All of these typically American and inherently decent qualities are exemplified, it seems to me, in the United Jewish Appeal."

Some 400 persons in the movie industry heard Ford's address at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel, then pledged $731,000, Cherner said. He predicted that Los Angeles will raise eight to nine million dollars this year for UJA, 10 to 12 percent more than last year.

Cherner has been criss-crossing the country by plane—although he fears flying—to make personal appeals for UJA, to which he himself will contribute $150,000.

He came to this country an immigrant boy from Russia. Now a millionaire auto dealer, banker, shopping center magnate and real estate entrepreneur, he still remembers the lower rungs of the ladder, he still realizes, he says, that "I could have been one of them — one of those unfortunate people UJA is trying to help out."

UJA is seeking 250 million dollars for mass immigration and settlement in Israel, rehabilitation in European lands and refugee adjustment in the United States.

Cherner is president of UJA for this area; is one of the national campaign chairman and a member of the national campaign "cabinet."

Tobin Speech Voids GE Vote, UE Protests

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A left-wing rival union yesterday challenged CIO election victories in eight General Electric plants on the ground that Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin had "interfered" in the voting.

The United Electrical Workers (UE), ousted from the CIO last fall for pro-Communist leanings, filed a formal protest with the Baltimore regional office of the National Labor Relations Board, demanding new representation elections.

The action put John A. Penello, NLRB regional director, and the five-man board itself, in the delicate position of passing judgment on the action of a Cabinet member—an unprecedented situation—in a labor relations dispute.

The UE charged that Secretary Tobin's speech on behalf of the CIO's International Union of Electrical Workers (IUE) at a union rally in Lynn, Mass., on May 21 "coerced" the General Electric employes from making a free choice of their collective bargaining agent.

The General Electric representation elections, carried on in 57 plants all over the country on May 25, involved 95,000. When the count was in, CIO-IUE had won in 49 voting units, covering 54,000 employes. Left-wing UE had won in 40 units, covering 37,000 employes.

Thus, CIO-IUE could and did claim dominance in General Electric, after having earlier won overwhelmingly among the electrical workers of General Motors, and decisively in Westinghouse.

The protest of the UE will, for the time being at least, confuse the situation. Should the NLRB order reelections at Lynn, where the Secretary of Labor threw his prestige on the side of the CIO's "basic Americanism," there would have to be a new ballot for the right to represent the 17,000 employes there.

UE insists that Tobin's talk in Lynn also adversely affected the left-wing union in elections held at General Electric plants in Fort Wayne, Pa.; Philadelphia, Pittsfield, Mass.; Holyoke, Mass.; Pittsburgh, Bridgeport, Conn., and Syracuse. These plants cover 28,000 more employes.

For its part, the CIO-IUE has asked the NLRB for new elections at two big General Electric plants won by UE. These are Erie, Pa., with 12,000 employes, and Schenectady, N. Y., with 15,000 employes. The CIO-IUE charges interference by General Electric Corp. on the side of the left-wing UE.

The UE brief declares that as Secretary of Labor, Tobin represented the United States Government when he urged Lynn General Electric employes to vote against the UE and for the IUE, charging that the UE was following the Communist line. The press quoted Tobin as saying a vote for UE would be against the interests of the United States.

Tobin's statement was a form of "coercion," the UE maintained, because the Secrtary of Labor controls certain investigatory and certification procedures under the Taft-Hartley Act. He also administers important aspects of wages, hours, and conditions of workers under the Fair Labor Standards Act, the UE said.

Augustana Session Will Hear Truman

President Truman will speak briefly at the 91st annual convention of the Augustana Lutheran Church at 4:45 p. m. today in Augustana Church, New Hampshire ave. and V st. nw.

The convention, attended by 475 official delegates, opened last night, and will continue through Sunday. All sessions are at Augustana Church.

At a pre-convention meeting of the executive council at the Roosevelt Hotel yesterday, Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson declared that a "greater closeness to God" would be a sure cure for much of the world's unrest.

"We need more church members, not those who just fill the church and make big contributions toward its support, but those who love their God and work hard at their faith," Donaldson asserted.

At a service opening the convention last night, the Rev. Dr. Karl E. Mattson, president of the Augustana Lutheran Theological Seminary, Rock Island, Ill., declared that the church must develop men and women who "make the burdens and afflictions of the people their own."

In addition to Mr. Truman, the convention will be addressed by Dr. P. O. Bersell, president of the church, at 10:30 a. m. today, and George C. Killinger of the United States Board of Parole at 8 p. m.

NLRB Rejects Denham Plea to Waive Union Shop Election

By The Associated Press

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday refused to go along with General Counsel Robert N. Denham in waiving union-shop elections in the widely scattered building and construction industry.

Denham had asked the board last December 19 to recognize the difficulty in conducting the elections in the industry, which employs about two million workers. He suggested waiving the elections despite the Taft-Hartley Act provision requiring workers to vote on proposed union-shop agreements.

The board's special policy statement on the issue was another round in the feud between the five-man panel and Denham. The board said the legal requirement for the union-shop elections is clear and must be followed.

Earlier this year the board supported President Truman's unsuccessful effort to have Congress eliminate Denham's job.

The board's statement, in effect, accused Denham of not obeying the law in waiving the elections. This follows repeated contentions by Denham that the board, too, is ignoring plain provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Only on Monday, Denham said in an interview with the magazine U. S. News and World Report that: "The board seems to have a yardstick for the application of the law which is quite different from the one I use."

The board said it was its duty to take the problem to Congress ourselves by administrative exemption of a single industry," "rather than to change the law

Business Bureaus Told of TV Boom

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

(Other Story on Page 1)

Television is the fastest growing industry in the Nation's history, and by the end of this year there will be 9 to 10 million sets in American homes, worth about two billion dollars.

This prediction was made by James H. Carmine, executive vice president of the Philco Corp., television manufacturer, at the second day's session of the Association of Better Business Bureaus in the Shoreham Hotel.

Carmine said the industry expects to sell six million receivers this year, and has installed 1½ million sets in the first quarter of 1950.

Hugh R. Jackson, president, Better Business Bureau of New York City, said radio and television sales and service were the No. 1 cause of complaints pouring into the New York unit.

Such complaints increased by 230 persons in the first quarter of 1950 over the same period in 1949; in fact the total represented 18.2 percent of all complaints handled by the New York office, Jackson declared.

He told of a New York dealer who offered a free trip to Bermuda with the sale of any television set on the floor. Would-be vacationists, however, found there were only a handful of sets available, all in the four figure category.

Carmine readily agreed that the industry was having its troubles with some shady sales and service practices, but blamed this on phenomenal growth.

He said some dealers had turned over the servicing of sets to contractors, who did not feel the same degree of obligation to satisfy the customer as the retailer. Where service was rendered directly by the retailer—as in 60 percent of the Philco sales—there was little difficulty, he stated.

Carmine advised television owners against signing long-term service contracts, contending that the quality of most present sets assured small maintenance cost.

The Philco executive predicted prices for television sets will continue downward as volume moves up. He said another factor in lowering prices is a reduction in the price of cathode ray tubes.

At a banquet last night awards were made to the Better Business Bureaus of Vancouver, B. C.; Cleveland and Akron, Ohio, New York City and Memphis, Tenn., for outstanding achievement during the year.

The group voted a preference for Boston as the place for the 1951 convention, but the final decision will be up to the association's board of governors. Mackinac Island, Mich., also has invited the organization.

Claude R. Woodward, director of the Better Business Bureau of Washington, was elected a member of the board of governors. He has headed the local bureau for more than a decade.

The convention continues today with a sightseeing trip, and is scheduled to wind up Friday afternoon.

Curran Refuses To End German Plant Dismantling

Judge Edward M. Curran of District Court yesterday refused to issue an order that would stop the dismantling of industrial plants in the Western Zone of Germany.

The order was sought by two American citizens residing in New York. They are Martin Opitz, who sued as a stockholder in certain of the corporations whose plants are being dismantled, and Elsie Williamowski, who sued as an American taxpayer. They sought a mandamus order against Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Judge Curran dismissed their suit. The Government contended that the court was powerless to grant relief in the case.

Rackets Jolted By Arrest of St. Louis Pair

St. Louis, June 6 (AP).—Police raided headquarters of a Nation-wide handbook business in St. Louis County yesterday, acting on information furnished by the Governor of New Jersey to the Governor of Missouri.

Two men, Sidney Wyman and Steve Montefelice, were arrested.

Copies of thousands of telegrams and letters seized in the place told a story of extensive betting and wagering handled through Western Union managers and from other sources, officers said.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch said preliminary examination of the extensive correspondence showed that C. J. Rich & Co., betting commissioners, offered Western Union managers "25 percent of the winnings at the end of the month, after deducting expenses for wire charges and form sheets."

A letter to a betting agent in Texas from C. J. Rich & Co., described the company as "one of the outstanding commission houses in the country."

"We quote prices on all major sports, such as baseball, basketball, football and also the presidential election," the letter said.

Horse-race information supplied by the betting firm, the correspondence revealed, included track conditions, scratches and jockeys.

Officers estimated there were 12,000 Western Union telegrams to Rich & Co. in April and May, dealing with bets.

Dope, Gambling Link Claimed

narcotics were involved in the multimillion-dollar traffic that exists today. They said Anslinger offered no figure on the total business but that he had told them it has declined over a 30-year period. He also said the Federal Government operates its narcotics branch on a budget no larger than it was 20 years ago.

Anslinger said the center of the dope trade is Istanbul, Turkey. He said the Government here has attempted to work directly with the Turkish government and also through the United Nations to break up the business.

The Senate committee will go much further into the narcotics business, especially as to its ties to other types of law breaking. Public hearings will be held at some indefinite future time, Kefauver said.

Truman Warns On Depression

recent years has been the salvation of private enterprise."

In Al Smith fashion, he asked the businessmen to "look at the record." Industrial production today, he said, is three times what it was in 1932. Whereas corporate business lost more than three billion dollars in 1932, he said, today corporate profits, after taxes, are at the rate of more than 18 billion dollars a year.

The President said the whole economy had been strengthened by the program which the Government has followed in the last 17 years—loans to business, bank deposit insurance, regulation of the security markets, old-age and unemployment insurance, minimum wages, slum clearance, low-rent housing; and the development of natural resources and legislation to aid the farmers.

These measures, he said, had stabilized the economy, widened purchasing power, and provided a climate in which free enterprise can flourish.

All this, Mr. Truman said, had been accomplished in the face of a propaganda campaign, backed by enormous sums of money, to make people believe that the policies would lead to disaster. It has failed, he said, because it was essentially false.

"In spite of this fact," he continued, "the campaign of propaganda is being stepped up this year. We are all being deluged with it. There are books, columns, advertisements, pamphlets, broadcasts, chain letters, all telling us that the Republic is in peril, that we are on the last mile, that socialism lies just ahead.

"The funny thing is that this has all been said before. The current campaign is almost exactly like the campaign of the old Liberty League, back in 1935 and 1936. It uses the same old slogans, the same old scarewords, the same old falsehoods. The only difference is that it sounds even more foolish now than it did fourteen years ago."

Mr. Truman said he noticed very little wreckage and ruin around the country when he crossed the continent recently.

He recalled that in early New Deal days, private insurance companies opposed social security, believing it would take business away from them. Actually, he said, the Government's social insurance has acted as a stimulus and a spur, with the result that today there are 65 million more private life insurance policies than there were in 1936—a 50 percent increase.

It is likewise with the private power companies, the President said, and told how they have increased their capacity by nearly 60 percent, although they argued that Government dams would put them out of business.

Mr. Truman said that with population growing steadily, it was essential that the United States have an expanding economy. Some politicians and commentators have been making fun of the idea that our economy has to grow continually, he said, but pointed out that responsible business leaders didn't share that view. He added:

"That General Motors Corporation and the United Automobile Workers recently signed a collective bargaining contract for a five-year period, providing regular wage increases based on increased productivity. This kind of faith in our future is the answer to the gloom and despair offered by the present-day Liberty Leaguers.

"A prosperous and expanding economy in the United States is necessary not only to provide an adequate standard of living for our growing population; it is also necessary to our paramount objective of peace and freedom in the world. That is an objective to which—above all else—we must dedicate our efforts and our resources."

Excise Tax Cut Hope Dim

million-dollar limit set by the President.

Still holding up the bill is a 600-million-dollar revenue shortage. Unless Congress finds new taxes to make it up, the President has threatened to veto the measure.

George told reporters he knew of no way to make up the loss unless Congress raises corporation taxes by at least two of the four percentage points recommended by the President. George said he is opposed to the increase but would hesitate to vote against it if he thought a veto would result.

There were one or two upsets as the House unit completed the excise tax section of the tax bill and prepared to search for more revenue.

1. The committee picked up 26 million dollars by voting to retain the 20 percent tax on electric light bulbs. The group had previously voted tentatively to halve the tax.

2. Later it "lost" 75 million dollars in revenue by overturning a tentative decision to tax mutual savings banks and building and loan associations, at corporate rates, on their surpluses.

Girl, 3, Hurt Badly in Fall From Window

A young Washington father tried unsuccessfully to prevent his three-year-old daughter from toppling from a bedroom window at his home yesterday afternoon, then jumped 15 feet from the window to give the child first aid.

Judy

The child, Judy Dubreuil, was rushed to Casualty Hospital with a possible skull fracture. The hospital said her condition was serious. Her father, Maurice Dubreuil, 32, of 715 A st. ne., a waiter, was treated for a sprained ankle.

The family said Judy climbed onto a radiator and pushed out a screen. Dubreuil had just stepped in the room, they said, and tried vainly to stop her.

He followed her out the window and made her as comfortable as possible while neighbors called an ambulance.

The Dubreuils have a son, Richard, 6.

Alexandria Sets Up Unit On Collections

Alexandria City Council yesterday set up a five-member committee to study means of collecting an estimated $60,000 which a recent audit disclosed is due the city.

The action was taken at a special meeting of the council after city officials reported the audit showed the city had not collected for services which were rendered by its employes, but which could have been charged to taxpayers. Included among the services were weed removal from privately-owned property and installation of driveways to private homes.

Named to the committee were Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim, chairman; Councilman R. Samuel Luckett, City Manager W. Guy Ancell, City Collector C. Page Waller and City Attorney V. Floyd Williams.

In other actions, the council allocated $270 from the city bond account to pay for street work for which no authorization was shown in the audit records, and granted a permit to Northern Virginia Youth for Christ to conduct a religious tent meeting at Commonwealth and Luray aves. the night of June 12.

Widow Seeks $100,000 in Damage Suit

The widow of a laborer, killed by a truck used on the job where he was employed last year, yesterday filed suit in Prince Georges County Circuit Court for $100,000 damages, charging negligence.

The laborer, John Dill, 58, of Laurel, was crushed by the truck on June 8, 1949, a he lay in deep grass near Berwyn's Town Hall, being razed after a fire, a police investigation determined.

The suit, filed by Mrs. Margaret E. Dill, names as defendants the Hi-Way Auto Wreckers, Laurel; seven members of the firm as individuals, and Alfred and Henry Scovitch and Andrew Zale, as co-partners.

The suit states that the Maryland Industrial Accident Commission, on May 31, determined that Dill was actually in the employ of the two Scovitches and Zale at the time of his death.

Meanwhile Alfred Scovitch, of 6100 Ruatan st., Berwyn, and Zale, of Laurel, have posted $1000 bond each for hearing in Hyattsville Police Court on June 22 on a charge of failing to carry workmen's compensation insurance. A similar warrant has been issued against Henry Scovitch, who reportedly lives in Opportunity, Wash.

Dill's death was ruled accidental by Dr. John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner, last year.

Utility Head Assails 'Phony Prosperity'

Atlantic City, N. J., June 6 (AP).—A call for the United States to industrialize non-Communist Asia and a warning that the country has a "phony prosperity" highlighted the Edison Electric Institute convention today.

William E. Knox, president of Westinghouse Electric International Company, told members of the private power trade organization the United States should supply Asia with completely integrated factories wherever justified.

These operations, he said, should be managed by American companies under direction of General MacArthur.

Profits would go to local charities under his plan, but the factories would be sold to local interests as rapidly as the economy of the country could absorb them.

And the amount of money spent by the government in Japan, he said should be limited to one-half of that spent in non-Communist Asia.

The 3000 delegates from all sections of the country also heard a warning from W. C. Mullendore, president of Southern California Edison Co., that the country is in "the most dangerous and unsound boom in history."

It is a phony prosperity," Mullendore said, and it is financed by "Government guarantee of unsound private loans, by legal counterfeiting and by confiscation of savings through inflation."

The California power executive said private companies that "pay their way are daily targets for insult and abuse as though doing business without a handout from the public treasury is somehow wrong or dishonest."

The delegates, elected Louis V. Sutton, president of Carolina Power and Light Co., Raleigh, N. C., as president of the institute, and chose Henry B. Bryans, president and director of the Philadelphia Electric Co., to fill the vice presidency Sutton vacated.

The institute's Charles A. Coffin Medal, awarded annually for distinguished contribution to the industry, went to the Washington Water Power Co., Spokane, Wash.

bor Departments, and the Fish and Wildlife Service.

Industrial concerns and private groups also will be asked to take some of the projects. By and large, technical and professional people will be required to carry out the projects. As one State official explained, the people who will be needed aren't looking for jobs.

An appropriation of 35 millions has been authorized for Point Four. Congress will have to make an actual appropriation before the projects can be contrcted for, and a staff built up. Actually, only about 14 millions will be available for Point Four even if the entire 35 million is provided by Congress. Included in the 35 million is 12 million for U. N. contributions, and 7 million for the State institute to help Latin America.

NLRB: Provisional layoff notices are being given to "less than 100" employes in the National Labor Relations Board. About 50 field examiners and 25 attorneys are among those that either have been or will be given pink slips. The notices will go into effect within 30 days unless the Senate restores funds and jobs cut from the NLRB budget by the House.

FSA: The Federal Security Agency also is giving out a few layoff notices. About 300 of its employes will get them as a preliminary step. Most of the notices will be withdrawn if the Senate restores budget cuts made by the House, but if it doesn't several thousand FSA employes will be fired.

PEOPLE: Raymond S. McKeough, David J. Coddaire and Joseph K. Carson are all expected to be appointed to key Federal jobs soon. They were members of the Maritime Commission and thrown out of jobs when that agency was transferred to Commerce . . . Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) is gaining support in his move to get the Senate to reject the President's plan to transfer Reconstruction Finance to Commerce. The odds, however, are definitely in favor of the plan's approval . . . Donald C. Cook, Securities and Exchange commissioner, sends personal notes to staff members on the anniversaries of their SEC employment, a morale-building gesture.

RFC: An entire new board of directors must be appointed soon by the President. The terms of the four board members expire the end of this month. The fifth board job is vacant. Insiders believe the President will appoint one or two new members to the board.

as interested as anybody to find out what happened to the 96 million dollars," he said. "But he is not willing to penalize agriculture because during the hurly-burly of the war years 1 percent is not yet accounted for."

Senator George D. Aiken (R., Vt.) said he assumed the 96 million dollars "are lost and we will never find them—they are gone forever."

Williams said later, however, he has been "unofficially informed that some of it has been found."

On another tack, Williams earlier urged the Senate to reject the price-support measure and vote instead to haul down the level of Government farm price guarantees.

This was defeated by a vote of 50 to 18 after Senator Allen J. Ellender (D., La.), acting chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, called it a "body blow to the farm program."

He said Congress would be "repudiating promises . . . on the statute books" and which farmers have every reason to expect carried out.

Polio Advance Granted

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis has sent an advance allocation of $9850 to its Fairfax County Chapter, it was disclosed yesterday by Chapter Chairman Edward K. Uhler. The funds, Uhler said, will be used for hospitalization and medical and rehabilitation services for county polio victims who still require aid.

U. S. Will Halve Staff in Warsaw

Warsaw (Wednesday), June 7 (AP).—The American Embassy staff in Warsaw has been ordered reduced by 50 percent.

An embassy source said today the State Department had ordered the cut effective July 1, but declined to say whether this was due to a request by the Polish government.

The current Polish diplomatic list records 18 staff members exclusive of officers of consular status. The total strength of American personnel is near 50.

United States Ambassador Waldemar John Gallman declined to comment.

Neglecting Mr. Ozaki

The lack of any local ceremony by way of welcoming Mr. Yukio Ozaki to Washington amounts to deplorable neglect on the part of both the Commissioners and the State Department. Here is a man who (as we went to great pains to say on May 19) has brought great pleasure and beauty and millions of dollars to the Capital City in cherry blossom time. On either count the Commissioners should have taken note of his arrival. All that has been done to honor Mr. Ozaki is, belatedly and informally, to give him a key to the city while he was calling at Commissioner Young's office. That is little better than nothing—perhaps worse than nothing. At least the Commissioners could have taken Mr. Ozaki to the Tidal Basin which he adorned with so much vernal radiance.

Aside from his gift as Mayor of Tokyo of the cherry trees, Mr. Ozaki is a distinguished visitor in his own right. Indeed, he is quite unique. He is one of the fathers of the Japanese constitution, a man who has sat continuously for no less than 60 years in Parliament. No other parliamentarian can match this record. During all that time he has built up a renown as a fighter for freedom and representative government which puts him in the front ranks of the great liberals of all time. Surely the State Department could persuade the President to spare a few moments to receive this remarkable old man, now 91, who is beloved by his countrymen as their Elder Statesman. Elementary diplomacy at a time when relations with Japan seem to be moving into a new field should alone warrant an invitation to the White House.

Blows To Segregation

The three unanimous Supreme Court opinions against segregation are less historic than most of the headlines proclaimed. They lay down no new principles. They upset no precedents. On the contrary, they follow the thinking of many previous Supreme Court opinions, projecting the doctrine of no racial discrimination on the part of governmental agencies or instruments of interstate commerce a little further than it had been carried before. The court held close to the issues of each case, consistently rejecting the broader implications that some lawyers and politicians sought to inject into these controversies.

In Sweatt v. Painter the court held that the University of Texas Law School must admit a qualified Negro student. It was no answer, the court said, that Texas had hastily organized a law school for Negroes. Since the trial of this case that school has acquired a student body of 23, a faculty of five professors and a library of 16,500 volumes and is apparently on the road to full accreditation. But any reasonable person knows that the new school could not offer opportunities for a legal education "substantially equal" to those offered at the University of Texas Law School. Through Chief Justice Vinson the court recognized this elementary fact and went back to Chief Justice Hughes' declaration in the Gaines case that the individual student is entitled to equal protection of the laws.

In the McLaurin case the court invalidated the foolish efforts of the University of Oklahoma Graduate School to maintain segregation within the school after a Negro student had been admitted. At first Professor McLaurin was placed in an anteroom adjoining the classroom. Then he was assigned to a special seat in the classroom, a special table in the library and in the cafeteria. Once more the court said simply that "the Fourteenth Amendment precludes differences in treatment by the State based on race."

The court did not reach the constitutional issue in deciding that the Southern Railway's segregation policy in dining cars could not stand. This decision rested solely on the Interstate Commerce Act which forbids a railroad in interstate commerce "to subject any particular person, . . . to any undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage in any respect whatsoever." The court found that prohibition equally effective against the arrangement under which two end tables in the dining car were provisionally reserved for Negroes (with a curtain separating them from the remainder of the car) and the arrangement under which one table with four seats was unconditionally set aside for Negro passengers. Going back to the McCabe and Mitchell decisions, Justice Burton said for the court: "Where a dining car is available to passengers holding tickets entitling them to use it, each such passenger is equally entitled to its facilities in accordance with reasonable regulations."

As a practical matter, this is probably the death knell of segregation in dining cars. While the court specifically declined in the Sweatt case to reexamine the "separate but equal" formula of its past decisions, it seems to leave Southern railroads with the alternative of abolishing segregation or putting on an extra dining car for Negro passengers. Similarly the States must abolish segregation or provide equality of opportunity in separate schools. And it is now clear that where no such equality exists, segregation bars must be let down.

The New Weapons

The psychological worth of the news about the new weapon is potentially immense. In France there is a lot of feeling that in the new dispensation of a "balanced collective force," the French will monopolize the role of foot soldiers. Mr. Servan-Schreiber in his current contribution writes gloomily about the position of France as the military proletariat. He uses as an analogy the Roman on their horses back of the legions from the lesser breeds of their dominions. It is an extreme illustration, but it serves perhaps to indicate a state of mind which might have obstructed the hope of developing unity in the defense of the West based upon specialization of function. The fact that there are in the making weapons which could stop aggression in its tracks should show the French that the old modes of conventional warfare will eventually be uprooted. This in turn should rub out any feeling of inferior status and "inequality within equality" in contributions to Western defense.

Another misconception that ought to be shattered is that the saber-rattlers are in the ascendant in the United States. It is the ascendant in the United States. When Secretary Acheson was in Europe, he must have encountered a fear that the United States and the Soviet Union were both spoiling for a reckoning on the battlefield of Europe. Now the Europeans will find the disproof in the new weapons announcement. The best way to prevent catastrophe, as Army Secretary Pace said yesterday at West Point, is "to be prepared to meet those masses of heavily mechanized ground forces with smaller numbers of highly scientific ground troops equipped with revolutionary new weapons." Not only does this country want peace, it is thus working in a practical way to insure it. It does not want to rescue, but to stop; for, again to quote Mr. Pace, "the greatest present threat to civilization as we know it is the possibility that western Europe may be overrun by hostile ground forces."

Nevertheless the announcement should not be regarded as shutting out the very possibility of a shooting outbreak. Certainly the Russians will be the first to take note of the American accomplishment. And they will not be deterred—on the contrary, will be spurred—in their own search for new weapons—offensive as well as defensive. Never can it be forgotten that there is nothing static in weapons development, and the history of warfare shows an alternation between the offense and the defense for ascendancy. For instance, when the last war broke out, Liddell Hart, the famous English military writer, believed that the defense was on top, and seemed to forecast a static war of no decision which seemed in the early days to be proven by the initial phoniness. He omitted to learn the lessons of the hitting power of the airplane and the tank. Similarly at the end of the war the same illusion prevailed that the offense had taken an unattainable leap ahead with the A-bomb, the "absolute" weapon. Writers, with the notable exception of Vannevar Bush, forgot the eleventh-hour work on the proximity fuse and the guided missile. These weapons, together with tactical A-bombs, are destined, as Mr. Pace said, to make tank warfare obsolete.

Thus the weapons race goes on, but the world will know that America is not asleep, and that the job of keeping ahead of the offense is being pursued with energy and imagination. There must be no relaxation in a Maginot Line world. Fortunately Mr. Pace's speech indicates that weapons will march to fruition in terms of a strategy of peace, with timelags to be broken according to ever-changing concepts of priority.

Dualism In China

The report is current in the Capital that we are dallying with the fifth (or is it the sixth?) postwar policy toward China. It is said that a Chino-American stand will be made on Formosa against the Chinese Communists should an attack be undertaken in the present season of good cross-channel weather. The money appropriated in the foreign aid bill for Formosa lends itself to that interpretation. This, of course, goes in great part for rural rehabilitation, but, beyond that, some of the money in the 75-million-dollar kitty for the "general area of China" is also destined for Formosa.

A non-Communist Formosa, preferably under American trusteeship, is very much to be desired. It has been this newspaper's view that the island should be repossessed ever since Governor Cheng Yi showed Chinese Nationalist unfitness to rule Formosa. Even now we don't exclude the possibility. It would be quite in keeping with the realities in China to back the repossession of Formosa and at the same time to support the admission of Communist China to the United Nations. Formosa is completely in a class by itself. Pending a peace treaty over Japan, it is still Japanese territory, and, if there is any justice in the world, Formosa should be held for the Formosans.

Moreover, dualism in respect of diplomacy in China is traditional. China has never been regarded as one and indivisible diplomatically. The powers, while rendering lip service to the integrity of China, have always done their diplomatic business with the de facto authority, wherever they found it, in Canton and in Mukden as well as in the Chinese capital. Moscow, for example, has never ceased to think of China as a plurality. Thus on the eve of the Communist taking over of Nanking, the Muscovites were as busy as beavers negotiating air and mineral concessions in Sinkiang with the Nationalist rump in Canton. The Communists seemed to be unconcerned. Indeed, when the Russians finally switched their allegiance to Communist Nanking, the Communists ratified the Sinkiang concessions without the slightest sign of hurt pride.

So there need be no trepidation about dualism toward China. The problem in respect of Formosa is, however, complicated. Granted that the retention of Formosa would be extremely useful to American strategy and policy in the Far East, what are we going to do about Chiang Kai-shek? Dualism simply cannot be undertaken unless Formosa is removed from the mainland conflict. Does anybody in his right mind, remembering Chiang's record in China, think in this respect Chiang can be restrained? Chiang Kai-shek has one aim, and that is to apply a match to a Russo-American conflagration, and so bail himself out. He is itching himself to declare war on Russia, and thinks, with the United States attached to his kite, he can drag us in. So he is banging away at the mainland of China with his American planes and his American explosives, not with any idea that he can capture anything—oh, dear, no!—but with the purpose of starting a wider conflict. Yet this sort of thing would have to be prevented as the condition precedent of a tenable policy of intervention in Formosa.

Let the new policy-makers on China in the Pentagon come up with the answer of how to restrain Chiang Kai-shek in Formosa. In that event and in no other should consideration be given to the proposition of our holding Formosa against the Chinese Communists. The latter is easier than the former, at least in respect of an outside attack. As to internal infiltration, the only safeguard here might be to give the Formosans some hope of a future independent of China. But, if Formosa is to be reclaimed as a necessary part of the island chain of an American defense, then it must not be treated as a point d'appui for Chiang's ambitions on the Chinese mainland. That is the way to get the worst of both possible worlds in the approach to China.

Ban On Slots

Two witnesses opposing antislot machine legislation before the House Interstate Commerce Committee have referred to a Washington Post editorial to support their objections. This is a misreading of the editorial; it isolates one comment out of the context on many comments on crime problems before Congress.

Specifically, the witnesses have cited our editorial of May 4 on Senate passage of the Kefauver resolution for an investigation of interstate crime. "Further consideration of specific bills," we stated, "might profitably be delayed until after the investigating committee reports." However, on April 21 we had explicitly indorsed the Attorney General's bill to prohibit interstate shipment of gambling devices, which passed the Senate unanimously. We noted: "Federal controls over shipment (except to States where machines are certified as legal) and registration of sales will certainly, as J. Edgar Hoover says, slow down the operations of gambling syndicates." We thus did not regard the antislot machine bill as an item of new legislation at the time of our comment on the Kefauver resolution.

As a general principle we reiterate our conviction that additional legislation on crime ought to await the Kefauver report. While the Kefauver resolution was still snagged in the Senate, for example, there was a legitimate fear that new and fairly innocuous bills might be introduced as diversionary maneuvers to obscure the need for a real crime investigation. Such considerations do not apply, however, to the slot machine measure, which already has passed one house. Certainly, enough is known about the subject, including the connection with criminal syndicates, to ban interstate shipment of them as a matter of public policy. In order to avoid litigation over what constitutes a gambling device, the House committee has narrowed the bill to cover only these "one-armed bandits." We think the bill is a constructive one which ought to pass this session.

Unity And Strength

In an address yesterday at St. Louis University, where he received an honorary degree, the Prime Minister of Canada, Louis St.-Laurent, quoted at some length from our recent editorial "The Road Back to America." He applauded The Washington Post's warning against McCarthyism, against playing into Communist hands by the adoption of Communist techniques, and then added this warning of his own in words that seem to us as apt as they are eloquent:

> One of the greatest dangers in any struggle with an unscrupulous enemy, as every practicing Christian knows, is the danger of descending to the use of the same methods and weapons, and thereby bringing oneself down to his level. If we are to preserve civilization, we must first remain civilized; if we are to preserve freedom, we must allow others to remain free.

This is an echo of the alarm bell sounded the other day by Senator Margaret Chase Smith. Tolerance of opinions with which we disagree is not a danger to the Nation; it is an indispensable condition of the unity which is the real source of national strength.

Recognition For Ozaki

I have addressed following telegram to the Commissioners of the District of Columbia:

"Have noted with amazement official Washington's apathy regarding visit here of Japan's great nonagenarian educator and architect of Japan's first constitution, Mr. Yukio Ozaki. After all, his gift of cherry trees in 1912 has brought millions of people and dollars to Washington; on that score alone a small friendly public ceremony of remembrance and appreciation would be appropriate.

In addition, of course, official notice of Ozaki's presence here would lend pleasant credence to our national efforts to promote democracy in Japan. It might be remembered also that he translated Herbert Spencer into Japanese before any of us were born. Hope you'll take some action." ALLEN HADEN.

Truman Vs. Truman

Will someone far wiser than the writer explain to him, and doubtless to many other equally confused souls, the apparently contradictory statements attributed to our Chief Executive as of June?

In his message to Congress, Mr. Truman urges that stupendous sums be appropriated for use in building up defenses against the aggression of hostile forces. We are made to feel by this address that the situation is desperate, and that unless we do make all of this vast sum of money for munitions available immediately we and other free people may be soon ground to dirt beneath the heel of a tyrant.

But in strange contrast with the mood of his appeal to the lawmakers, Mr. Truman greets the newsmen with an almost jocular spirit; declares that war is farther off than ever, and that he has maintained this position during his recent tour of the country; that he does not agree with the recent Gallup Poll, which seems to find the danger of war hanging heavy on the minds of many.

Even the radio reporters and commentators were confused, according to their statements on the evening of June 1.

Is Mr. Truman trying to keep the favor of those who advocate this mighty defense in arms, both military men, politicians and munition manufacturers, and at the same time allay the fears of the "little people?" What does Mr. Truman himself really believe? Will he tell the people honestly and clearly?

Ideas Vs. Arms

Please let me heartily applaud the intelligent utterance of Philip L. Graham, speaking recently to an advertising club in Ohio, in which he stressed the importance of ideas in this world of man-made conflicting values, instead of personalities or things.

The same note was sounded by General Marshall in his wise and temperate Memorial Day address which was pleasing contrast to some of the tub-thumping, chest-beating exhortations of various of our self-appointed superpatriots.

Just possibly the human race has arrived at enough mental maturity to realize that the age-old struggle between good and evil is never to be decided by matching flesh and blood against machine gun and bombing planes.

From spears, bows and arrows and tomahawks to H-bombs, all that weapons and armaments have ever determined is which side can perpetrate the most evil.

Our present global impasse once again demonstrates the irrational futility and inconclusiveness as well as the diabolical wickedness of that man-made insanity known as war.

Preventing Delinquency

Let's stop waiting until a young person is a delinquent before action is taken. Couldn't a program be started that will affect every preschool and school-age child in the United States? For an example, start day nurseries for young 3, 4- and 5-year-olds and have it compulsory for every child to attend. Their young impressionable minds can be taught fair play and certain rudiments of spelling, reading and good social habits. Each teacher could be chosen not so much on how much education she has, but how much she loves and understands children. It would be a great service to overtired mothers who, though conscientious, cannot find the time nor patience needed to bring out their children's best traits and individual talents.

"Professional" Jurors

Harry A. Stewart, jr., in his letter of June 3, calls attention to the fact that as a member of the Committee of the Administration of Justice, Col. E. Goring Bliss is quoted as having said, "Fewer experienced jurors are reaching court panel here . . . The newer and inexperienced jurors . . . are creating a serious problem."

Mr. Stewart interprets "experienced" to mean professional persons and says, "Professional men in a court of law are and should remain judges and lawyers. Professional jurors would deprive a man of a fair trial."

To me this means, not experienced jurors but experienced persons, serving as jurors. Persons experienced in the ways of the world. As Mr. Stewart says we are entitled to be tried by a jury of our peers, our equals. I should certainly prefer to be tried by persons of large experience.

Juries are notoriously emotional. A wise man once said that if guilty he should ask for trial by jury. If innocent, trial by judge. It is much easier to mislead a jury than a judge. Count me as voting for jury panel comprised of persons with as wide experience as we can possibly get. In that case, some of the rascals who are now getting off will certainly be found guilty.

"Juvenile Court"

Your June 2 editorial regarding the recent resignation of the two social workers from the staff of the District Juvenile Court was, on the whole, a cautious and well-balanced presentation. There are some implications in your writing, however, which are of concern to me as a teacher of adolescent children.

Naturally, I do not know the complete facts of the present disagreement. From what has been reported in the press, it appears that the principal difference is that the judge tends to commit more youths to institutional care than the two social workers think is appropriate.

In the last 20 years there has been an unfortunate garbling and distortion of psychiatric and psychological concepts, particularly as applied to children. The generalizations and assumptions of modern psychiatry must be understood thoroughly within the context of many qualifying and limiting factors, and are difficult to apply properly even by highly trained specialists.

We find, however, among the public at large, and particularly among boards of education, educators, child welfare committees, and similar well-intentioned people, an attempt to dabble in major psychiatric therapy, a practice for which they are unqualified. We find that they have read and been lectured at by "popularizers" of a scientific psychiatric thought. These people have absorbed a number of pat and meaningless generalizations about the biological basis of the child's emotional life and have been successful in imposing their rigid formulations upon school systems and social agencies.

When applied to the schools and juvenile courts in this area, we find an attitude prevailing among many of the "psychiatrically enlightened" citizenry which holds that since all children are what they are because of their environment, it is society's fault if they err, and society as a whole must put up with almost any kind of behavior because "the child is what he has been made" and his actions are not his "fault."

Thus, teachers are told that they must learn to teach all types of children together, no matter what their rate of learning or emotional state. Homogenous grouping, they are told, would be psychologically bad for the children. The teacher should be able to keep 30 to 40 adolescents busy and interested as they work in 5 to 9 different groups simultaneously and do this with 4 to 6 different classes daily—these groups to include even extreme delinquents.

When we get to the Juvenile Court problems, the same attitude prevails among these so-called educational "progressives." A child is brought before the court frequently several times for robbery, assault and other serious crimes, and our "psychiatric philosophers" want him "rehabilitated in the community" or "discharged in the custody of his parents." I maintain that this attitude is not "progressivism." It is short-sighted and dangerous dogmatism.

My own position is that teachers and parents should learn as much as they can of what scientists have found about child behavior and try to apply it, but they must always be on guard against dogmatism and rigidity.

Secondly, be careful not to misinterpret child behavior experts in the light of your own bias. When they say to consult the child on certain matters they always mean appropriate matters. They do not mean that you should place on an adolescent's shoulders the burden of planning a large part of his life which is an adult responsibility.

And lastly, the most important thing in today's picture: Children who are so ill that they cannot live in an ordinary community without harming other children and adults, must be promptly removed from the community to a special institution where special provision to treat them can be made. By the time a case comes up in Juvenile Court, many efforts have been made to help the child. The chances are very great, therefore, that most cases consist of children not amenable to ordinary help and the outcome of most such cases should logically be commitment, particularly for offenders who are before the court more than once.

Lining Up Youth

"I CAN still see them—those legions of Hitler's marching youth. I tried to look into their eyes, but found nothing there. I felt a cold sense of doom."

The American speaking, one whose forebears were political refugees to this country from Prussian militarism, had visited Germany in 1937. His memory, like that of many another former tourist, has been kindled by the recent Communist youth march in eastern Berlin. Hitler's youth is not easily forgotten. Congress has at least two members, Senator Paul H. Douglas and Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas, whose decisions to enter political life were influenced in part by witnessing as tourists the demonstrations of young Nazis.

Now it is Communist youth. And this cloud on the horizon is not confined to eastern Berlin. In western Berlin, where youth has not been regimented or taught to goosestep, there is yet the question of political apathy, even of dormant waiting for some authoritarian leader.

But the question of which way youth will turn is worldwide. C. L. Sulzberger, chief foreign correspondent for the New York Times, said in his recent series of articles on the impact of American foreign policy abroad that this country "has lagged dangerously in any effort to win over and educate the youth of the world." He pointed out that all revolutionaries from Mazzini to Stalin have avoided that mistake and that "it does no good to rely solidly upon the support of disappointed generations or exiles when building for the future."

BUT WHAT can democratic forces do to win youth? How can they meet the competition of authority, rosy promises of security, the fanfare of militarism that the police state offers?

U. S. High Commissioner of Germany, John J. McCloy, who was quick to recognize the implications of the Berlin youth demonstration, believes that the answer in Germany must primarily be the development of a liberal, prosperous community in the western zone.

The same approach is fundamental in the rest of the world. But more special attention to youth's needs and youth's psychology, both in Germany and elsewhere, is necessary. More books, athletic fields, recreation centers, vocational help, lodging places for the homeless — all these material things need to be provided on a wider scale.

But the question also has to be attacked psychologically. That is not so easy as those who urge a big "sell democracy" drive seem to think. Slogans, pamphlets, lectures, classes, indoctrination from the top down won't suffice. Democratic attitudes and practices have to be built from the bottom.

The practice of democratic ways of doing things—in organizations, meetings, discussions, games—has been found the most effective method in making democracy stick. It is used in youth activities in occupied countries. But it takes time.

IN THE meantime free youth itself might be enlisted to do more. For it can speak with more influence to its fellows than can anyone else. To do this it must have contact with them.

Senator William Benton, in his recent Senate speech for a "Marshall Plan of Ideas," pointed out that former foreign students who studied here have always been among our best friends abroad and that most of them go home to become leaders of their countries. He proposed an exchange program that would absorb as many as 100,000 foreign students a year.

The Fulbright scholarships are sending an increasing number of capable youth abroad to study each year. And large numbers of American young people go to Europe for summer study at their own expense or financed by private organizations—even though unfortunately the low rate student ships formerly operated by the Maritime Commission and United States Lines have been withdrawn.

The best strategy of democratic forces for quick action is to go after potential leaders among the world's youth. A big help in doing this would be for this country to bring greater numbers of promising foreign youth here to study, travel, observe, to get a true, not propagandized, picture of democratic government. It could also make it easier for American youth to go abroad. And it could encourage the training and recruitment of American youth to engage in a crusade of ideas—which might prevent future enlistment in a crusade of arms.

Competition In Arms

One need not be a partisan of Senator Tydings, as this writer is not, in order to recognize that the Senator from Maryland and others, by their realistic insistence upon the ending of the international competition in arms, place themselves in the front rank of the world's enlightened legislators. While no nation of its own accord will compromise its competitive position in arms, no nation thereby can assure its national security. Assurance can come only through mutual security guaranteed to all nations through the force of an international authority.

Defense Of Europe

By Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber of Le Monde (Paris)

1. What Kind Of Danger?

THE END of May and the beginning of June, 1950, probably represent a landmark in the newborn Atlantic history. For the first time the nations of the Atlantic community have agreed to do a job in common, as a unit. Now, there are mainly three aims that a confederation of nations can try to achieve as a unit: political planning, economic stability, military preparation. It is today clear that, under the impact of a strange world atmosphere and by the force of tradition, the Western nations have chosen the third one as their first test of unity.

In many ways, that is very unfortunate. But we have to take it as it is. The second installment of military aid to Europe is before the American Congress, a common strategic board presided over by an American is very soon going to function, and the principle of real integration has been agreed upon at the military level. So, the dice are thrown, our potential unity will stand or fall on the first test—the military. We have to make it a success.

But the present confusion can very well turn that success into failure. While we agree on the principle of building a common military force, it remains very unclear what sort of military potential we want and for what kind of a struggle. Time is a sort of conspiracy of silence on the subject. Each one is afraid of discovering too precisely what the other thinks.

So, on both sides, we live on pretenses and good words. That facade is bound to crumble at the first contact with reality. If that occurs, it is very conceivable that the unity of the West will be smashed in the process, and on all levels. Which, of course, would mean the victory of Stalinism in the cold war. The only way to prevent that failure is to speak clearly, today. And, in particular, for the Europeans to do so. What kind of conception of the necessities of defense do we believe in?

TODAY the American conception seems so unclear to Europe that many pro-Atlantic Europeans are beginning to think that the American policy is based, from now on, on the inevitability and proximity of war. Which means giving up priority to military preparations. That first conception would be absolutely inacceptable to Europe. To put it clearly: If most Europeans were convinced that war is now inevitable—or that America acts on that assumption—the pressure of public opinion would force government after government, all over the continent, to declare neutrality and independence from America.

The mere suspicion about it, that exists today after the London conference and several utterances by American officials, already has grave consequences. The famous Communist-inspired "peace appeal of Stockholm" gets list after list of signatures in every French city. Moderate political leaders, magistrates, and even one cabinet minister have signed it. At least two Socialist leaders, at a recent party congress, have championed a European "third force" disentangled from American policy.

THE SECOND conception, which seems to be closer to the official American one, is that we have to live up to a constant possibility of a conventional military clash with Russia. This means a struggle between two military machines, supported by the full economic potential of the countries involved, and using all possible weapons (including A-bombs) for several years; a modernized version of the pattern of all preceding wars.

Acting on that assumption the West should then progressively build, on all levels, a military establishment comparable with the Soviet one and proceed to a semi-war economy, in order both to keep in pace with the Soviets and be able to switch eventually to a war economy.

That second conception is no less inacceptable to Europe. The first one would lead to immediate political disaster in Europe, this second one would lead to progressive economic collapse. And, again with the same result: separation from America, the falling apart of the Atlantic community.

THEN WHAT is the European conception?

We believe, first and foremost, that the era of conventional military war is closed. So that it is just as obsolete, facing the Soviets, to promote an all-around military preparation, as it was, facing Hitler, to build the Maginot Line.

Then we conceive the Soviet threat to the West as being of two kinds, both under and over the level of conventional military war. The first one is a combination of political disintegration with limited guerilla warfare or civil war. Ernest Bevin said so last month, and the French Minister Jules Moch stated last week that, "First Italy, then Germany, and finally France were likely to fall that way." The second is a combination of atomic power with fifth column tactics, leading to the possibility of atomic blackmail inside any European nation or even the United States.

Now our counter-plan has to be adapted to those two modern dangers. It must clearly be very different from the traditional building up of a balanced military establishment. It calls for articulate action on four counts.

First, complete and unquestionable unity of the Atlantic nations, spelling automatic solidarity on all fronts. Second, internal security against the Communist cancer, mainly in Europe. Third, a constant strategic potential of atomic retaliation, replacing the old concept of defense. Fourth, a moderate military force in Europe to prevent the Soviets from too great a temptation to fill in the vacuum by limited aggression.

The first problem is basically political. The second is mainly economic. So, in the whole security plan, only the third and fourth represent the military part. And among them one is almost entirely American. Finally, the only part on which the present military debate, following the London meeting, is brought to bear is the fourth one. The next article will try to make clear what can be expected from Europe on that count, without undermining the two first ones.

Matter Of Fact

Stop Faking

PARIS—It is time to realize that the Western defense problem can be successfully solved, if it is energetically tackled. But there is another point that must also be realized. There has been a shocking amount of fakery in the Western defense effort to date.

The simplest possible illustration of the faking that is still being practiced is contained in the President's recent request for $1,222,500,000 for foreign arms aid. Within this total, a sum of 75 million dollars is earmarked as an American contribution to the defense of Southeast Asia, including Indo-China. Here is fakery which can be easily proven.

In the first place, during his Paris visit, Secretary of State Dean G. Acheson promised the French all-out American aid in the effort to hold Indo-China against the Kremlin's imperialist drive.

In the second place, the mere initial installment of aid requested by the French amounted to nearly ninety million dollars worth of equipment and supplies. The long-range French program now in Washington comes close to 300 million dollars. No doubt these French requests may be sharply revised downward, or partly met from American surplus. Yet no one can suppose we can fanance all-out aid for the French with what is left over from 75 million dollars after Indonesia, Burma and other claimant regions in Southeast Asia have also taken their shares.

IN THE third place, neither Acheson's promises nor the requests of the French are what compel us to make a massive effort to save Indo-China. A powerful French army is fighting in Indo-China. It needs material aid, which can only come from us, to contain and throw back the Communist guerillas. If the Communists triumph in Indo-China, Asia will follow the same road. In short, in this matter, we are not only breaking our own promises and ignoring military realities. We are also defying the logic of events, which is the worst fakery of all.

The same rules, unfortunately, hold true for the foreign military aid program as a whole. Previous reports in this space have already shown that the general level of effort represented by the President's $1,222,500,000 request is now utterly inadequate. Much greater investments by all the partner nations of the West, and especially by the United States, are needed to build a Western defense in a reasonable time.

Furthermore, one cannot even say about the military aid program that it is good as far as it goes. On the contrary, some extraordinarily disquieting facts about it are now beginning to emerge.

For example, the 1950 MAP program for France was agreed upon last November. It included more than 200,000 tons of equipment. It was to provide arms for the French ground army on an extensive scale. When it was approved by the Defense Department, the French were delighted.

After much public pointing with pride by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, the first 2000 tons or so of this equipment were shipped to France some time ago. Since then, the French have vainly sought to discover when they would receive the remaining 99 percent of what has been promised to them. Additional cargoes do not come.

THE TROUBLE seems to be that carrying out the program for France will involve temporarily depleting the American strategic reserves, and later replenishing them with newly manufactured weapons. There is no sign that the necessary heavy orders for new weapons have yet been placed, which should have been done last November. Meanwhile Secretary Johnson is hesitating to authorize depletion of the strategic reserves.

There is no excuse for this sort of mess. Either the program for France should not have been approved last November, or Secretary Johnson should be ready and eager to carry out that program now. But while what has happened cannot be excused, it can at least be explained. Secretary Johnson has made almost as many loud claims about his efforts to build up the defense of the West as he formerly made about his "economies" in the American services. It would now appear that both sets of claims were equally phony.

All this faking has been happening, moreover, against the background of Secretary Johnson's own public acknowledgments that the defense of the Western world is the only possible defense of America. And while the faking has continued, more and more important and far-reaching American defense commitments have been made.

ON THIS latter point, few people anywhere grasp the extraordinary significance of the approval of the principle of a "collective" defense at the London conference. It looks so easy for every nation to abandon the idea of national arms production and balanced national forces. It looks so efficient for every nation to agree to make only the most economical and useful contribution to the common pool of strength.

But in fact, a crude example is enough to show what this principle can mean. Suppose, for instance, that the French agree, which they will not do, to make their only contribution to the common pool in the form of infantry. They will then be in the position of relying entirely upon American and British air and naval power. But this, in turn, will put the Americans and British in what amounts to a position of trust. They will be in honor bound to help the French with air and naval forces from the beginning of any fighting until the end of any fighting. In short, there is here implied a total military alliance.

Since we cannot escape in any case from the duty of defending the West from Soviet aggression, there is nothing wrong with a total military alliance. What is shockingly wrong, however, is to enter such an alliance as senior partner and then to fail to organize any serious defense. This is what we have done and are doing. This is the real danger. Either the fakers must go and the faking must stop, or we shall see the Western front against Soviet aggression dissolving before our eyes, and much sooner than we like to think.

Reorganization Awry

By Marquis Childs

Gimmick In The Maritime Commission

PRESIDENT TRUMAN has spoken a great many earnest words about Government reorganization and Government efficiency in pushing for the Hoover Commission's plan to reshape the Federal colossus. But as so often, the gulf between words and deeds is an abyss that compares with the Grand Canyon.

Childs

Congress gave the President the power to make over the Maritime Commission and reshape the Department of Commerce to consolidate authority over transportation agencies in the department. This was a move long urgently needed.

Having been given this new authority, the President promptly used it to promote one commissioner who had come under congressional criticism for mismanagement, irresponsibility and incompetence while at the same time ignoring the claims of another member of the Maritime Commission who has repeatedly sought by his dissents to meet the charges leveled by Congress.

The President nominated Maj. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, formerly chairman of the commission, to be Undersecretary of Commerce. Under reorganization this is a most important office with authority over transportation agencies in the Commerce Department. But Fleming, his career in the Army and Government notwithstanding, has hardly demonstrated his ability to take over this new and responsible assignment.

In fact, a House subcommittee has twice been sharply critical of the way in which the now abolished Maritime Commission lavishly dispensed Government funds in subsidies to American shipbuilders. While recognizing the need to encourage ship construction for defense purposes, the committee nevertheless found that the law had been stretched repeatedly so that the shipping lines were risking comparatively little of their capital while letting the Government underwrite a guarantee of profits.

THE UNITED STATES Lines is building a superliner which will cost 70 million dollars plus. The line is putting in seven million dollars in cash and over the life of the vessel another 21 million dollars. But the latter can be paid out of the operating subsidy provided by the Government in addition to the construction subsidy.

A special tax gimmick in the Merchant Marine Act of 1936 gave the lines tax exemptions which may have been necessary then in view of the difficulty of raising capital for ship construction. But the lines made huge wartime profits, thanks in no small part to this gimmick. Thus one company paid $570,000 in Federal taxes since 1936, whereas without the special exemption, it would have paid $13,846,000.

The subcommittee's first report did not reflect on General Fleming, since he had only recently taken over the chairmanship of the commission, which had become a kind of feather bed for retired admirals. But the second report censured him for lack of understanding, quibbling and delay in failing to review shipbuilding contracts previously let. Similar criticism had come from the General Accounting Office.

The former maritime commissioner ignored by the President is Raymond S. McKeough, for five years a commission member. A political appointee, McKeough mastered the intricacies of maritime authority and regulation and in repeated dissents protested against the kind of practices resembling those which led 15 years ago to a Senate investigation that brought out appalling misuse of the taxpayers' money.

WITH THE commission abolished under the Reorganization Act, there is created in the Department of Commerce a Federal Maritime Board of three members, one of whom is chairman. The chairman is also the Maritime Administrator. The President named three "acting" members to this board but McKeough, who had the strongest political indorsements from his home State of Illinois, was not on the list.

Shipping interests are pressing hard for bigger and better subsidies. The report persists that Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer will resign in the late summer or early fall. Candidate of the shipping lines to replace him is said to be George L. Killion, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee. Killion was put in as head of the American President Lines in which the Government exercises a controlling interest growing out of loans advanced to the lines.

No matter how well-intentioned policy may be, it can be nullified by appointing men out of sympathy with that policy or incapable of administering it. President Truman vetoed the Kerr natural gas bill with a strong message of rejection and then a few weeks later reappointed Nelson Lee Smith to be a member of the Federal Power Commission although it was Smith who recommended to Congress that independent natural gas producers be taken out from under Federal regulation.

The pattern of presidential appointments in the Department of Interior stands out in strong contrast. There two new Assistant Secretaries named under reorganization—Vernon D. Northrop and Dale E. Doty—are both career men who have advanced in the department on the record of efficiency and initiative. Deeds must match words if reorganization is to be effective.

Ship to Rail—Rail to Ship

Except for the low cost of water transportation, it would be impossible for railroads to obtain the volume of traffic that they do on combined water and rail or rail and water tonnage. In many cases the cost of such tonnage, if handled solely by railways, would be excessive or prohibitive. An example is the millions of tons of coal carried annually by rail to ports on the Great Lakes and the East Coast for transshipment by water. A large part of this tonnage is again handled by railways after its movement by water. And whence comes most of the vast tonnage carried by railways from coastal and inland ports into the near and far interior of the nation? It comes from vessels using the splendid system of harbors and waterways—coastal, Great Lakes, and inland—prepared by the Federal Government. Certain tonnage is naturally the business of railroads or trucks. Other tonnage is naturally the business of waterways and can be so transported with great benefits to consumers at costs no other system can approach.

RFC Purchases Lustron Plant

Columbus, Ohio, June 6 (U.P.)—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation today bought the Lustron Corp., which owes the agency $37,500,000, for six million dollars.

The RFC was the only bidder at an auction ordered by Federal Court after foreclosure by the RFC on its mortgages. Lustron, maker of enameled steel houses, has been in receivership since March 6.

Jeff Frazier, manager of the Cleveland RFC office, said the plant would not be reopened but would be offered for sale by negotiation to private interests.

The auction climaxed an experiment in Government financing that began in 1947 when the RFC, acting under the now-expired Veterans Emergency Housing Act, gave Lustron its first assistance. The loan, bearing 4 percent interest, was scheduled for full repayment in 10 years. Lustron never paid any interest or principal, and as late as February, one month before RFC foreclosed, was asking for additional Government help.

Lustron's RFC borrowing long was a target of repeated congressional criticism. One of the chief complaints was that Carl G. Strandlund, organizer of the firm, put up only $1000 of his own money to finance the venture.

High prices were one of the troubles Lustron was unable to overcome.

Tells How to Secure A Mastery of English Quickly

An interesting new booklet offered free to men and women who want to secure a real mastery of the English language tells of a "foolproof" method for studying English usage without attending classes. The plan, as described in this little book, has been worked out by Grenville Kleiser, who has helped thousands of students to better command of English.

According to the publishers, this world authority uses no involved rules of grammar or rhetoric, but presents a simple, straightforward inspiring method that secures real results in very short time. Thousands of users of this method, they say, have gained increased power to express themselves in fluent, convincing, clear-cut English and so have improved their possibilties of social and business advantages.

To acquaint more men and women with the advantages of improving their understanding of English, the publishers, Funk and Wagnalls Company, have printed full details of this speedy, pleasant method in a booklet which they will send to anyone who requests it. The address is Funk and Wagnalls Company, Dept. WP-66, 153 East 24th Street, New York 10, New York. A penny postcard will do. There is no charge for the booklet.—Adv.

Mergenthaler Buys Control of Chicago Firm

By S. Oliver Goodman

Mergenthaler Linotype Co. yesterday announced the acquisition of a majority interest in the Davidson Manufacturing Corp. of Chicago.

The Davidson firm makes rotary duplicating presses, paper feeders, paper folders and various supplies used in offset printing.

Martin M. Reed, president of Mergenthaler, said "there is a natural affinity in the activities of the two companies. The purchase not only fits into the linotype company's diversification plans but also will enable Linotype to broaden the service it renders customers. . . ."

The announcement added that an offer has been made and steps are being taken by Mergenthaler for the acquisition of minority stockholdings in Davidson. When that action is taken, Davidson will be operated as a wholly-owned subsidiary of Mergenthaler.

Mergenthaler is the largest manufacturer of typesetting equipment and operates around the world. Its stock is widely held in Washington and William G. Flather, jr., its board chairman, lives here as well as several directors.

Davidson was founded in 1938, and now occupies a Chicago plant of about 100,000 feet of leased floor space. There were 136 employes at the start of this year. Net sales for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1949, were $1,424,498 as against $1,898,991 the previous fiscal year. The income account shows a net deficit of $92,999 as compared with a net income of $7734 the previous fiscal year. Total assets were $1,558,233, at the latest fiscal year.

SLIGHT DIP: Peoples Drug Stores, Inc., yesterday reported net sales of $3,736,362 in May, a decline of $24,899 or less than 1 percent under the same 1949 month. For the first five months, the chain's sales aggregated $18,548,823 or 1.5 percent less than in the like 1949 period. Treasurer W. H. Churchill said the company operated 142 stores in May, against 141 in corresponding period last year.

IN NEW POST: William H. Milton, jr., has resigned as General Electric Co's commercial vice president with headquarters in Washington to become general manager of the Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory. The laboratory, a recently completed 26-million-dollar facility in Schenectady N. Y., is operated by G. E. for the Atomic Energy Commission. Milton joined G. E. in 1920 following his graduation from the Virginia Military Institute. He served in various executive positions and in April, 1947, was elected a commercial vice president and assigned to customer relations activities in the District of Columbia.

IMPROVEMENT: Eastern Air Lines, Inc., reported earnings running ahead of last year. Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, president, reported income at 66 cents a share for the first three months of the year. This compared with earnings of 54 cents a share for the first quarter of 1949. Rickenbacker reported Eastern's cargo traffic and air coach service were being operated at a loss, but said profits from other type flights more than offset this deficit. Cargo business alone, Rickenbacker said, was losing $75,000 a month. He estimated it would take five or 10 years before such business could be run on a profitable basis.

HOST: The Washington Rubber Group announced yesterday it will be host to 750 members of the Rubber Chemistry Division of the American Chemical Society at the annual spring meeting here. The three-day convention will open February 28 at the Shoreham Hotel. Chairman of convention arrangements will be Dr. Norman Bekkedahl of the National Bureau of Standards.

McGinity's 10% Bubble Bursts; Country Can't Afford to Pay

By J. A. Livingston

WHEN the professor and I stopped to pick up McGinity on our way to the chess club, Mrs. McGinity said he'd already left. "Probably at Gilhooley's," she suggested. "A dark spell's come over him."

She was right. McGinity was at his usual table having his usual three boilermakers. He was figuring furiously on the back of an envelope. "Hi, professor," he called as we entered, "you're just the man I want to see. I'm disgusted. I've been wasting my life, my substance, my talent.

Livingston

"I've lost $7715.61," he declared woefully, "10 percent on $10,000 in six years. Why don't I get in on the ground floor of these good things? You, professor. You're supposed to know something about economics and finance. Why didn't you tell me?"

"Easy, Mac, easy." The professor might have been talking to a startled colt, his voice was that soothing.

McGinity fumbled out of his pockets a newspaper clipping. He handed it to the professor. "Read that and weep as I do," he commanded.

The professor began reading a column by Ralph Hendershot, financial editor of the New York World-Telegram and Sun, and soon was shaking his head and tsck-tsck-tsckking.

"Mac," the professor said sternly, "just use common sense. Who ever heard of making 10 perecent a year, year-in-and-year-out? That's Ponzi stuff, and you know what happened to Ponzi."

THE PROFESSOR then explained to me that Hendershot had been to lunch with Frank Cryan, senior partner of a New York securities firm named Brady & Co., and Cryan had told Hendershot that his firm had been "able to show a financial return to its customers in excess of 10 percent annually since its inception six years ago."

"Do you believe it?" I asked.

"Well, 10 percent's not such an exceptional record in the last six years," said the professor. "Don't forget, the market today is 60 percent higher than it was at the end of 1943. Add another 3 percent or 5 percent a year in dividends to that and you'd easily get, say, 78 percent to 90 percent on stocks, or better than 10 percent. But that means staying with your stocks steadily."

"Just like a professor," harpooned McGinity. "Never to do, always to belittle."

The professor disregarded the remark. "The trouble is, such statements are misleading. They're a come-on. They suggest that everyone can earn 10 percent on his money. The fact of the matter is that most people daren't try to earn 10 percent or even 6 percent. Anybody who plays for a profit of 10 percent a year takes a risk—a big risk. The man who has to have money for his old age or to put his kids through college doesn't want to see his money shrink in case the stock market goes down. He can't afford to buy speculative stocks and bonds. He's got to keep a good part of his money in high-grade bonds or preferred stocks."

McGINITY WAS listening for a change.

"Furthermore," continued the professor, "it's impossible for everyone to make 10 percent a year, year-in-and-year-out. This country grows at the rate of about 2½ to 3 percent a year. So investing's an economic lottery. Some people are lucky or skillful enough to make 10 percent. But for them to succeed, others have to lose. After all, you've got to average out to 2½ to 3 percent over the long run. That's the country's growth."

"So, you think this guy Hendershot's all wet?" McGinity was less belligerent.

"I'd say he was over-optimistic," said the professor. "And I think he does a lot of harm implying that investors can make 10 percent a year. It just can't be done consistently."

"Let's all have a drink on that!" McGinity was as cheerful as a guy who had just found an unexpected $7715 in his pants pocket.

"By the way, Mac, if I'm not being too personal, how did you invest the $10,000?" the professor asked.

"What $10,000?" McGinity wanted to know.

"The $10,000 you didn't make 10 percent a year on."

"Oh, that!" McGinity smiled. "A guy can dream, can't he?"

"Well, then, why didn't you dream it was $100,000?"

"And blow my tpo!" said McGinity. "Not me."

English Church Asks Help in Fund Drive

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

A rural English parish is seeking funds to restore its historic church, and in voicing its plea for aid has disclosed an apparently unknown map of Washington.

The appeal for aid comes from Pickering, Yorkshire, where funds are sought to restore the Church of St. Peter and St. Paul, an example of Norman architecture dating back to 1150 A. D. and containing the most extensive range of fifteenth century wall-paintings in Britain.

In a letter to The Washington Post, signed by W. Wallis, vicar of Pickering, and other members of the parish, it is stated:

"On the north wall of the chancel a tablet commemorates two men, both born and brought up in Pickering, of families often figuring in the registers of our church, who played not unimportant parts in the building of your city.

"They are Nicholas King, surveyor of Washington, baptised in our church on July 29, 1771, and who died in Washington May 21, 1812; and his father, Robert King (sr.), baptised and married in Pickering Church, who for five years before Nicholas was also surveyor of Washington, and who returned to England and died here and was buried in our churchyard December 2, 1817, in his seventy-seventh year.

"We have had the interesting good fortune to find in the possession of a descendant of Robert King copies of two surveys he made, one of Washington as a whole and the other of the Capitol . . ."

One of the maps alluded to in the letter is the third map to be made of the city of Washington. It was engraved by C. Schwarz in 1818 from actual survey, "as laid out on the ground by R. King, surveyor of the city of Washington." In the lower corners are vignettes of the south front of the President's House and the east front of the Capitol.

A copy of the map, a black and white engraving, is on display now in the Library of Congress' District of Columbia Sesquicentennial exhibition.

Tinted Manuscript

The other map, which from the photograph sent from Pickering appears to be a tinted manuscript, is "apparently unpublished," according to Dr. Nelson Burr, of the Library of Congress.

Dr. Burr—who pointed out the double rows of trees shown along the streets on the maps and said they were Thomas Jefferson's idea—said the map was similar to, but not identical with, a map by Benjamin Latrobe, and tentatively estimated it to date "around 1803."

First of the King family to come to Washington was Nicholas King. Subsequently, his father, Robert King, sr., and brother, Robert King, jr., and sister, Jane King, all came to Washington.

The King men were all official surveyors here at various times. In 1800, Robert, jr., for example, was appointed to have charge of the survey of lots and certifying of levels to those about to build. His brother, Nicholas, may also have been the city's first librarian. Their sister Jane married a John Levinthal here.

Pickering has modern associations with Washington, too. On the chancel walls of the church are memorials to Ambassadors to Britain, Joseph H. Choate and Walter Hines Page, the latter unveiled by Ambassador Frank B. Kellog in 1924. More recently, the paneling of the chancel, provided by joint American and English subscription, was dedicated by the late Archbishop Temple, and commemorates Anglo-American friendship in peace and in war.

Picking's famous old wall paintings are suffering from damp seeping through the walls, and the stone walls, no longer waterproof, are beginning to crumble. For restoration of the walls and protection of the paintings 6,500 pounds ($18,208) is needed.

The parish has raised by its own efforts 2,250 pounds ($6302), but, the appeal says, "the task is a heavy one for a small country town of under 400 inhabitants, by no means all members of the church."

British Official Kicks at High Hem

London, June 6 (AP).—A minister of the Labor government rebelled today against the trend to shorten skirts.

Dr. Edith Summerskill, Minister of National Insurance, told a fashion show crowd:

"The new look is a splendid design for women politicians. We can cross our knees discreetly on the platform and forget that our mothers told us no lady should do so.

"I can lounge on the front bench in the House of Commons and even speculate seriously upon putting my feet on the table.

"I protest on behalf of all the women of Britain at the order from the mysterious man behind the scenes to put our hems up just as we had got them down.

"Mine stay down."

Dr. Summerskill is handsome, statuesque and 49.

Leukemias Survive Two Wonder Drugs

The wonder-working hormones, ACTH and cortisone, are proving to be of little benefit in the treatment of leukemias, it was reported here yesterday.

Neither of the two, once hailed as promising drugs for the so-called blood cancers, has shown as good results as an older drug, aminopterin—which helps but cannot cure the fatal condition, said Dr. William Dameshek, Boston blood expert.

They've also failed to check the fatal course of Hodgkin's disease, but ACTH has given "striking and dramatic" relief against one form of lymphosarcomes, a rare disease of the lymph tissues, Dr. Dameshek reported.

He spoke here at the opening session of the 28th annual meeting of the Association of Former Internes of Freedmen's Hospital.

Dr. Dameshek, director of the Hematologic Research Laboratory, New England Medical Center, Boston, said results of use of the two drugs with 25 patients suffering true leukemias "have been very disappointing."

At yesterday's meeting, 30 internes, assistant residents and resident physicians at Freedmen's were inducted into the association. Some 200 Freedmen internes of former years are attending the meetings which continue through Thursday.

Hearings on Saving Stone House Postponed

Ideal Father Deadline Only 3 Days Away

"Poor ol' neglected father" is a phrase of the past. We can prove it. Families, friends and anonymous admirers have made it possible for us to acquire the praise vocabulary of the century. Wondrous words have poured into The Washington Post Ideal Father Contest, all meaning about the same thing—fathers are slightly terrific.

The deadline for all entries is Friday at midnight (June 9). To be specific, in case those golden words haven't found the end of your fountain pen—it's only three days off.

Doctors, stepfathers, a business manager of a valet center, mechanical engineer in the Navy Department, disc jockey, statistician, violinist and about every line of work in the paybooks are represented so far.

Then, on June 18, the big day when father reigns supreme, the winner hasn't a minute to himself. Accompanied by his family, he tells the radio audience of WTOP about how it feels to be the most publicized father of the day.

A real dinner is what every man appreciates, and it's off to the Statler Hotel for the Ideal Father family. The sky's the limit! Finally, escorted to the Loew's Capitol Theater and presented from the stage, he enjoys the show of the day.

Then pop with an engraved plaque and the winning letter under his arm, heads for home with his gang—tired but happy, we bet.

Address your letter to the Ideal Father Editor, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Mention ages of the people in the letter where possible, and below your signature write the school you are attending.

Abolishment of U. S. Maritime Commission Seen as No-Confidence Vote on Competency

By Ysabel and Robert Rennie

When the Senate went on record 59-14 in favor of the President's plan to abolish the Maritime Commission, it was not a vote against our subsidized merchant marine, but a vote of no-confidence in a badly run Government agency.

The commission, set up under the Merchant Marine Act of 1936, was fortunate in having such strong chairmen as Joseph P. Kennedy and Emory Land during its early years. But recently it has suffered from a weak chairman and feuding commissioners.

Personnel has been incompetent, accounting bad, administration worse. After investigations by the Hoover Commission, the General Accounting Office and the House Committee on Expenditures in the Executive Department, the President recommended the commission be abolished. Its functions are now transferred to a Federal Maritime Board and a Maritime Administration in the Department of Commerce.

A post mortem shows at least two causes of death. One was its own incompetent administration. The other was the Merchant Marine Act itself, which demanded more than the commission form of agency is able to provide.

Synthetic Product

The United States merchant marine is a highly synthetic product. It is maintained by a regime of shipbuilding subsidies, operating subsidies, tax privileges and generous charter provisions. Without them it could not compete against the low-cost merchant fleets of other Nations.

The Maritime Commission was charged with the delicate and difficult business of determining how large those subsidies should be. It had to calculate the difference between shipbuilding costs at home and abroad, as well as differences in wages, insurance, maintenance, repairs and subsistence involved in actual operations.

At best, foreign costs are hard to determine, and in recent years the policy of the commission was to grant American shippers the highest subsidies possible under the law. The General Accounting Office found that "the subsidies granted are factually insupportable."

When the House Committee pressed the commissioners to explain their extraordinary subsidies, one replied he was sure foreign costs were as low as calculated because he had spent 18 months in Britain during the war. Another referred vaguely to a European trip on which he had visited shipyards.

Both Congress and the GAO were scandalized by these ouija-board methods. It must be admited, however, that cost differentials are all but impossible to calculate, particularly in this period of rapid price fluctuations and abnormal exchanges.

Tax Exemptions

In addition to subsidies, American shipping lines received major tax exemptions between 1938 and 1943. The twelve subsidized lines received benefits which came to somewhere between 56 and 61 million dollars.

In 1938 one line, operating to South America, had only $16,000 of capital invested in subsidized operations. Thanks largely to tax exemptions, this capital by 1941 had grown to $8.4 million. Outright tax exemptions have now been abandoned in favor of generous tax deferments.

American shipping lines are not required to invest in their own ships. They may lease them from the Government. Again, the annual rental of 5 percent plus 3½ percent for depreciation is computed on an imaginary cost of construction in a foreign shipyard. Actual costs may be 100 percent higher.

Is this program good or bad? The answer depends on whether you are looking at the economic or defense aspects of the merchant marine.

If the Maritime Commission's recent subsidies were correctly calculated, it now costs nearly twice as much to build a ship in this country as abroad. It costs half again as much to operate one.

Subsidizing this kind of differential is an economic waste of resources. More important, it flies in the face of our whole foreign aid program. We are giving dollars away with one hand, and with the other preventing other countries from earning them. Many nations—Norway for one — are heavily dependent on their shipping for foreign earnings.

But economic calculations are not the whole picture, nor at the present time, even the major part of it. Experience in two World Wars has demonstrated that we could not fight a global campaign without enormous troop and freight-carrying capacity.

Our present program spoon-feeds the merchant marine. It may not encourage efficiency, yet it may still be cheaper than alternative methods of providing a shipping reserve.

Hearings Set On Changes In Fairfax

Fairfax County citizens will have a chance this month to give their views on any changes they believe are necessary in the county government.

The special 21-man commission appointed by the Fairfax Board of Supervisors to study possible revisions in the county setup yesterday announced a series of hearings to be held in various sections of the county.

The hearings will be at the Lorton School on June 13; Bailey's Cross Roads fire house, June 16; Herndon School, June 20, and Centreville School, June 23. Dates for meetings at Oakton and Groveton will be announced later.

The executive committee of the commission, which is headed by David Lawrence, newspaper columnist, also will have supplementary hearings in July for county-wide citizens' organizations that have made special studies of the county government or which may have special data to offer.

The county now is governed by a board of supervisors with an executive secretary. A petition for a referendum on the county manager form of government is before Judge Paul Brown of the Fairfax Circuit Court. The referendum is expected to go before the voters in the November general election.

Lawrence has outlined a tentative plan for the report to be made by the commission at the end of its study.

Part 1 would be a brief, point-by-point factual statement of what various optional forms of government are available for Fairfax County.

Part 2 would be a digest of points brought out in the hearings on the advantages and disadvantages of each of the proposed plans, and the existing form.

Part 3 would voice the recommendations of the commission.

The executive committee has decided that commission members should be asked not to participate in activities of organizations either advocating or opposing changes in the county government.

The Board of Supervisors will be asked to provide a supplemental appropriation for technical assistance to the commission. The amount to be asked will be fixed later. The original appropriation for the study was $300.

One on the Aisle—

A Solution Heard For E St. Impasse

By Richard L. Coe

A NEW YORK weekend probing into theater possibilities here next season turned up several fundamental misconceptions but one likely idea.

Each June, Actors' Equity signs a new basic contract with the managers' organization, the League of New York Theaters, Inc.

Judging from unofficial emissaries, the managers seem to think it likely that Equity will drop its clause requiring nonsegregation for Washington's legitimate theaters.

This means that most of the managers, including the powerful Theater Guild, which booked four months of the National's final year of playing time, are holding off booking Washington for next fall and winter. They are counting on the National being available, have, in fact, a few tentative ideas of playing the E st. house.

All that, however, is based on the assumption that Equity will drop its clause.

This, Equity vows, will decidedly not happen. The Equity Council members not only are in favor of retaining the controversial clause; they point out that, in the Gayety, Washington has a theater.

For some weeks the rumors have been that should Equity drop its clause, Marcus Heiman, controller of the National, would revert to live theater on the nonsegregated basis the Equity members require. All this, however, comes from the managerial sources without any definite assurance that such would be the result of the union's action.

Equity President Clarence Derwent points out that the union has not started this talk; that it feels the success of the Gayety is proof of the wisdom of the clause, and that for Equity to drop the clause would admit that it was wrong in the first place.

However, a solution to this difficulty has been suggested, and, while it's slightly humorous, it seems to have what it takes to placate both sides:

A smultaneous announcement by both Equity and Mr. Heiman, the union dropping the clause and the theater magnate reopening the National to all.

While this puts an Alphonse-Gaston finge to a matter that has disrupted theater in the Nation's Capital for several years, such an ironic twist might be a fitting finale.

It's All Economics

The reason the managers would prefer to get the National back is simple economics. The Gayety, if pressed, seats about 1500. The National seats 1680. A few hundred seats each performance totals up to several thousand dollars at the end of a week.

The Guild, which finds it thoroughly distasteful to be dragged into this discussion, can't help being. It has some 15,000 subscribers here, a larger proportional representation than in any other city in the land; in fact, in recent years, a Guild show amounted to almost sold-out houses for two weeks—if you weren't a member you didn't always get seats — unless you settled on "The Student Prince" or "Blossom Time." More than this, it's an embarrassing business for Lawrence Langner and Theresa Helburn, the Guild's codirectors, because its subscription set-up, the American Theater Society, has two other partners, the National's Marcus Heiman and the Shubert Brothers.

So it is that with next season in sight, Langner is in the position of a man cutting off his own head. A few weeks ago he issued a statement that there would be Guild subscription in Washington next season at "a theater." By inference, he seems to have meant the National, but if he thinks the actors will drop their clause he has another think coming. He's said nothing and, what's more, done nothing publicly about the matter since.

He's afraid, apparently, to risk taking on the Gayety if there's a chance the National might reopen, and many other managers, fearing the booking power of Heiman's United Booking Office, don't want to risk signing up with the smaller Gayety and by-passing Heiman's National.

That may bring you to the Government's trust suit of last winter against the Heiman-Shubert combine, but such won't get you very far. The case is proceeding slowly and the worst that's likely to happen, in a few years' time, is that the combine will get rid of some of its road theaters which haven't been doing very well anyway.

Pleased by Gayety

As for the Gayety, Cheryl Crawford is reported to be pleased with the public acclaim for the current "Brigadoon." Other managers know that all productions the theater has offered have paid off, but for large budgeted shows they would prefer the National.

One more thing is clear in the New York atmosphere: no one is going to invest a cent in another theater while Mr. Heiman holds the National in its uncertain position. Several, who shall go nameless, broke their word with ANTA in plans to renovate the Strand. That deal broke down when they got to thinking more what the National might do.

So, although Mr. Heiman holds a strong hand with the National's fate uncertain, the managers are missing a bet if they think Equity will drop its clause. As for George Jessel's juicy announcement of a 3-million-dollar playhouse, that lies far in the future and I'll believe it only when I see it.

Perhaps the simultaneous announcement idea, Alphonse-Gaston though it seems, is at present the best way out.

Federal Aid to Education Bill Believed Dead

There will be no action on Federal aid to education during this session of Congress, informed Capitol Hill sources predicted yesterday, despite the change in chairmanship of the House Committee on Education and Labor.

Representative Graham Barden (D., N. C.) yesterday was elected chairman, succeeding Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.), who died May 27.

In views, background and political opinion, Barden is as nearly the exact opposite of his predecessor as it would be possible to find. Yet, during recent months the two men, after bitter political battles, had become personally friendly.

Barden became embroiled in a heated religious controversy over Federal Aid to education with Cardinal Spellman of New York, after he introduced a bill barring any aid to other than public schools. Lesinski, a Roman Catholic, was violently opposed to Barden's views.

The change in chairmanship, however, will not result in action this year on any general aid to the education bill, in the opinion of most observers.

Barden, who is known to be anxious to head a smoothly functioning committee, is expected to devote much of his time to closing the many rifts and splits that have developed within the group on every conceivable issue.

As far as Federal aid to schools is concerned, Barden's voting record leaves great doubt that he will personally ever drop his own opposition to any kind of compromise that would permit the use of public tax money even for such auxiliary services to school children as bus transportation for those attending nonpublic schools.

The North Carolinian is an ardent States Righter, opposed to Federal controls. He is committed to the principle also that public tax money can be used only for public schools.

'Colonel' Held In Bond on Fraud Charge

"Colonel" Stanley Waldorf Moulding, 61, yesterday was held under $5000 bond for a hearing June 21, charged with forging the name of Mrs. Key Pittman, widow of the Senator, to an airline charge account.

Municipal Judge Armond W. Scott set bail after hearing from Assistant United States Attorney Warren Wilson that Moulding was an escapee from a California road gang, and had a criminal record dating back to 1919.

For the last two years Moulding has served as Mrs. Pittman's business manager.

Moulding was charged with forging the name of Mrs. Pittman "as a subscriber" to a Universal Air Travel Plan contract. Police said he signed her name "By Col. Stanley W. Moulding, business manager, 2620 Foxhall rd. nw." That is Mrs. Pittman's address.

Other charges, including the forging of Mrs. Pittman's name to a $985.42 check, will be presented to the grand jury, Wilson said. Police are still investigating information they have that Mrs. Pittman's losses might total $75,000.

Moulding's lawyer, Sidney Sachs, asked Judge Scott to consider the fact that Moulding had surrendered to police voluntarily, in setting bail.

Wilson countered by saying, "A warrant has been outstanding against this man since March. He is still wanted in California on a vagrancy charge. He escaped from a road gang there in 1933."

Moulding stared stolidly ahead while Wilson talked. A gray-haired, gray-mustached man just under 6 feet, he was described as a "charming gentleman" by Mrs. Pittman. She told reporters, "I trusted him implicitly."

FBI records show that Moulding first ran afoul of the law in Schenectady, N. Y., in 1919, where, under the name of Stephen William Mackenzie, he was charged with grand larceny. He served six months in jail for a false pretenses charge in Kansas City, Mo., in 1928, and 180 days in Pasadena, Calif., for vagrancy in 1933, the records show. It was from this sentence that he escaped, Wilson said.

Man, Wife Ask Pay for Gun Injury

A road grader operator, injured in 1949 by an air gun pellet, yesterday filed a $25,000 suit in Montgomery County Circuit Court to compensate for the injury and for loss of time on the job.

The plaintiff is Joseph McKenney of 119 Geneve ave., Takoma Park, Md. In addition his wife, Mrs. Mae L. McKinney, is suing for $5000 for loss of her husband's earning capacity after the accident. He was struck in the thigh by the pellet.

Defendants in the suit are Peter Dalo, 16, of 3308 Cummings la., Chevy Chase, Md., a student at Leland Junior High, named as the youth who fired the airgun; George, 14, and Gregory Crowell, 15, of 6604 Connecticut ave., Chevy Chase, Md., identified as the owners of the gun who let young Dalo use it, and the Crowell boys' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Crowell of the same address. The Crowells were sued for allowing their sons posession of the firearm.

The McKenneys are represented by Attorneys Stedman Prescott, jr., and Donald K. Staley.

75 pct. of West Germans Vote to Stay Occupied

In West Germany 76 percent answered "unwise;" in the U. S. sector of Berlin 86 percent were against the withdrawal.

ceived by the State Department from the FBI.

"2. The Department of Justice has informed us that no such chart was ever prepared by the FBI.

"3. The chart in question was merely a preliminary document prepared by one of the State Department's security officers as a basis for further investigation.

"4. No persons purportedly identified on that chart as Communist agents, Communists and the like are now employed by the State Department except those whose loyalty has since been thoroughly checked, evaluated and reviewed under the President's Loyalty Review Board."

The department promised it would issue a further statement on the subject. In the meantime, officials indicated that the document was a working paper of an investigator, comprising listings of all people under suspicion, or against whom charges had been leveled.

The photostat that McCarthy circulated, however, included a passage in which the State Department investigator and author of the document said, "FBI has prepared a chart, now in the possesion of (name deleted) which purports to show a number of 'agents' . . ."

The investigator, however, apparently seriously questioned the FBI classifications, for he said:

"It turned out that the FBI had produced no convincing proof that any persons was an actual agent: In other words, FBI had made no case to show espionage or a violation of the Foreign Agents Registration Act, or similar legislation, in any case. The word 'agent' was therefore being used by the FBI . . . to mean simply a suspect in espionage activities.

"No proof of actual Communist Party membership had been produced by the FBI. The word 'Communist,' therefore, was used merely to describe cases of such close affiliations as to lend credence to a hypothesis that the person in question was a member—a fact still to be proved."

McCarthy added that the word "sympathizer" was also subject to further of such qualifications and the word "suspect" was apparently an all-inclusive one and "it might or might not include anything significant."

Nevertheless, McCarthy told the Senate, if the FBI classed a man as an agent or Communist, he was willing to accept its judgment.

"That to me is proof," he said. "In my book that is proof despite all the screaming and squealing of those who say, "McCarthy, you should not expose them because you are injuring those poor people; you are smearing them."

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), commenting on the disclosure, said the material was "by far the most significant direct evidence" so far presented in the controversy over McCarthy's charges of "Communist infestation" of the Government in general and the State Department in particular.

Knowland said the special Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee investigating McCarthy's accusations would be "derelict" in its duty if it did not at once use its subpena powers to obtain the original documents, including the FBI chart referred to.

He added that unless the persons named by the FBI were discharged, "it seems to me there may be a case for impeachment somewhere along the line."

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) rose to compliment McCarthy for his "effective presentation" and "constructive approach" in connection with his new material. It was much more effective, Ives said, than "coming here and naming names."

He chided McCarthy gently for not having enough faith in the desire of the other 95 Senators to root out subversives, Ives insisted they were as eager to do so as was McCarthy.

But he went on to compliment McCarthy highly for his "new approach" and to wish him good luck in it.

Last Thursday Ives joined six other Republican Senators in a vehement blast, clearly directed at McCarthy, against smear tactics and irresponsible accusations while protected by congressional immunity for libel action.

Two days later, however, in Ives' presence, the Young Republicans of his State unanimously indorsed McCarthy's campaign and "the spirit in which it was brought."

Earlier yesterday, even before Ives complimented McCarthy on the Senate floor, he declared that there was "accumulating evidence that the Administration is trying to whitewash the State Department" on the Communist charges.

The White House, meantime, deferred action yesterday on a reported plan to name a nonpartisan citizens commission of three outstanding persons to review the files of some or all of the persons McCarthy has accused.

The plan, anticipated in press reports, came up for debate yesterday in connection with McCarthy's speech. McCarthy himself referred to the idea disdainfully, calling it a "trumped up" device, which would simply render "another whitewash."

Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.) took a more hopeful view, but insisted such a commission could not return a report that would win the confidence of the American people and of Congress unless it was bipartisan in nature and unless the Republicans were selected by the Republican members of Congress, and not by the President.

And all Republicans who spoke insisted that the full files on all the cases must be made available to it, and that they should have been made available long since to the special Senate investigating subcommittee.

Hickenlooper Is Renominated; Loveland Named as Opponent

Des Moines, June 6 (AP).—Senator B. B. Hickenlooper rolled easily to renomination in Iowa's Republican primary and promptly joined the issue today with his November Democratic opponent who campaigned as a Brannan Plan supporter.

Albert J. Loveland, 57, who recently resigned as United States Undersecretary of Agriculture to risk his political neck as a Brannan Plan man, squeezed through to a narrow victory in the Democratic senatorial primary.

Loveland polled 38,000 votes and got 6000 plurality in a six-way race. When his triumph became assured, Loveland commented he viewed the results of Monday's primary as an indorsement of his campaign themes.

Hickenlooper polled more votes than his own two adversaries and the six Democratic Senate candidates combined.

Lester S. Gillette, prominent farmer, handily defeated Myron J. Bennett, a radio entertainer, to become the Democratic opponent of incumbent Republican Gov. William S. Beardsley. Beardsley was unopposed in the primary.

of the votes it will go to State convention sometime in July.

Of the Republican aspirants for governor, Joe Foss is a Sioux Falls World War II flier who won the Congressional Medal of Honor. He campaigned by plane. Competing with him for color was Leedom, Rapid City attorney, who used a circus calliope and passed out colored balloons to the children. Leedom is is the son of a former Republican State chairman.

Others in the race were Attorney General Anderson, Webster; Finance Secretary Dalthorp, Aberdeen, and Irwin R. Erickson of Vermillion, who is a former State senator.

The only other contest being settled by the primaries was Second District congressional nomination by the Republicans. In the race were Joe H. Bottum, Rapid City, a former State chairman; and E. Y. Berry, McLaughlin attorney and newspaper publisher. They are seeking nomination to the seat being left by Case.

Miles Leading Chavez In First Meager Count

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 6 (AP).—A three-way race for the Democratic nomination for Governor developed on a sampling of today's primary election returns in two sections of New Mexico.

United States Representative John E. Miles led in first returns in his campaign to return to the Governor's chair after an absence of seven years.

But the trend was not conclusive.

The sampling showed Miles running neck-and-neck with former U. S. Judge David Chavez, jr., in Santa Fe, only northern city reporting, and Miles and Lake J. Frazier staging a close race in eastern New Mexico.

The handful of votes did not reflect Chavez's strength in northern New Mexico, where a large Spanish-speaking population usually backs his brother, U. S. Senator Dennis Chavez.

Two Witnesses Urge, Oppose Oil Duty Hike

Assistant Secretary of State Willard L. Thorp yesterday vigorously opposed restrictions on foreign oil imports as "unnecessary and inadvisable."

Thorp testified before a Senate Labor Subcommittee that is looking into the effects of such imports on unemployment and other problems connected with coal, oil and mining industries in this country.

Some witnesses have testified foreign oil imports are seriously damaging these industries in the United States. Thorp took issue with that.

"In the absence of serious injury to the domestic oil and coal industry," he said, "the disadvantages (of restrictions) seem to outweigh the benefits of the over-all national interest."

Thorp said the United States cannot restrict foreign oil imports without violating specifically the separate trade agreements with Venezuela and México and the recent multi-nation trade and tariff agreements it signed at Geneva and Annecy, France.

On the other hand Gov. Okey L. Patteson of West Virginia urged the subcommittee to find some way of "increasing the rate of duty on imports of oil, or limiting the maximum quota on such imports."

New Charges Are Lodged Against Tyler

William A. Tyler, jr., accused of the Good Friday murders of two Landsburgh and Bro. department store watchmen, was reindicted yesterday.

Three counts were added to the original indictment returned May 15—two charges of murder while attempting to commit grand larceny, and one charge of murder while committing robbery.

Watchmen John C. Carpenter, 66, and Oliver R. Hess, were murdered in the store early Good Friday morning. The 18-year-old Tyler confessed to both crimes May 6, but repudiated his confession 10 days later when he was arraigned.

The original indictment charged Tyler with the first-degree murder of Carpenter and Hess, and murdering each while committing the offense of housebreaking.

The murder-robbery count added in yesterday's reindictment, charged that Tyler took a dollar pocketbook and $51 in cash from Carpenter, murdering him during the commission of that offense. Assistant United States Attorney C. Frank Reifsnyder said the reincluded in the plans is "schooling" date" charges against Tyler.

Va. Transfers By AB&W To Be Sought

Alexandria City Councilman Marshall J. Beverley said yesterday he would ask the State Corporation Commission to force the AB&W Transit Co. to issue transfers in view of a blanket interstate increase granted the utility.

Beverley said he would introduce a resolution at the regular City Council meeting next Tuesday night, authorizing City Attorney V. Floyd Williams to submit the request. He said he also would ask the council to send a representative to an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing on the company's request for a companion interstate fare boost.

The State commission approved the fare increases last week, increasing the cost of intrastate fare tokens from four for 30 cents to four for 50 cents. A corresponding increase in interstate fares, however, was held up when the ICC withheld approval pending a hearing.

In advocating issuance of transfers, Beverley noted that persons living in many sections of the city must ride "at least two different buses" to reach frequently visited destinations within the city. Under the present system, they must pay separate fares for each ride.

County Airport Strip Considered for Road

The Prince Georges County Commissioners yesterday took under advisement a proposal by Fritz Schrom, principal owner of the Schrom Airport at Greenbelt, to take over the airport's landing strip as a county road.

In addition to the 7000-foot strip, Schrom offered a 1125-foot right-of-way to connect the strip with Good Luck rd.

Schrom's original offer to transfer the strip and right-of-way to the county for one-third of the cost of the strip was rejected, but his subsequent offer to give the property free of charge was taken under consideration.

County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman was instructed to investigate Schrom's statement that he was informed by Bureau of Public Roads officials that the Greenbelt rd. cloverleaf intersection with the Baltimore-Washington expressway would connect the other end of the airstrip with Greenbelt rd.

Schrom was asked by the commissioners to submit a definite proposal for the transfer after consultation with other members of the corporation owning the airport.

The commissioners appointed Robert Jones, of Harford County, as assistant county agent, filling a post which has been vacant for several months. Jones, who graduates from the University of Maryland this year, will assume his duties July 1.

In other business, the commissioners approved auto license tax rebates for 1949 of $2314.25 to Hyattsville and $133 to Forest Heights; authorized advertising of bids for street improvements in Newton Village, and instructed their attorney, Jerrold V. Powers, to draft an ordinance restricting parking on 65th st., Maryland Park, in front of the Maryland Park High School in accordance with request of the State Roads Commission.

Sabotage Plot Suspected on British Carrier

London, June 6 (AP).—The British Admiralty today confirmed what may have been a sabotage attempt on the 23,000-ton aircraft carrier Illustrious on May 1.

An Admiralty statement said three signal flares were found in a boiler room on the ship while it was carrying Viscount Hall, First Lord of the Admiralty, and other high officials to Liverpool for the launching of the carrier Ark Royal.

"No explosion occurred and there was no damage or casualties," the Admiralty statement said. "Investigations are being continued."

Naval sources said ignition of the flares, which contained magnesium, could have resulted in a serious blaze.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE TIME HAS COME to view the Detroit Tigers with more respect in American League affairs. With no modesty whatsoever, they are saying so themselves. Not in so many words, but with a lot of basehits and other demonstrations of a very good ball club.

There they are this minute, breathing hot on top of the league after shouldering the Yankees out of first place plus being comfortably in front of the Red Sox. And it is no comfort to the Yankees that the Tigers have only lately started to roll. Nor can they be accused of playing over their heads.

POVICH

If anything, the Tigers aren't yet squared away. They'll be a better club later on—when Gerry Priddy starts pumping more fire into his mere .232 batting average and when Virgil Trucks gets rid of his three-week-old sore arm.

When it is considered, too, that the Tigers were without the talents of such as Hal Newhouser for the first month of the season, and that he has now started, finished and won his last four games, you get an idea that Red Rolfe's team could do very well from now on.

PERHAPS THE BEST commentary on the Tigers is that Pat Mullins, the league's most renowned spring hitter, can't come close to breaking into the Detroit outfield this year. In fact, the outfield of Vic Wertz, Hoot Evers and Johnny Groth that Rolfe has going for him might rightly be rated the league's finest.

They've won 12 of their last 13 games, but the Tigers haven't exactly been overpowering the opposition—merely beating 'em nicely. They aren't a home-run club. They've hit only 27 homers for themselves, while Detroit pitchers have yielded 35. But those devastating doubles and triples that George Kell, Wertz and Groth have been hitting have paid off.

In fact, this is the year when Kell could ascend to the distinction of being the league's most valuable player. He won the batting title last season and is demonstrating that was no flash in the pan by leading the league again at this point with a .388 average. And for years he's been giving the Tigers the best third base protection in the league.

MR. WALTER O. BRIGGS, who owns the Tigers, has spent uncounted hundreds of thousands of dollars beautifying Briggs Stadium for the day when the Tigers would win another pennant there. He's proud of the league's greenest grass, smoothest infield, and only underground sprinkling system. Also the shiniest, cleanest seats and the most polite ushers.

But if the Tigers are winning the pennant, they aren't doing it in Mr. Briggs' pet stadium. They're winning it on the road, in the mangy goat-ridden parks where the proprietors are not as interested as much in eye-pleasing appointments as they are in eye-pleasing gate receipts. They're the most sensational road club in modern big league history.

In their own park, the Tigers haven't been able to break even this season, blowing 9 of their 17 games. But traveling, they're been no less than roadmasters with 20 wins in 23 games. They've giving the Red Sox a lesson in how to win away from their own park.

SHORTSTOP JOHNNY LIPON was supposed to be the glaring weakness of the Tigers before the season started. Every club in the league would welcome his kind of weakness. He's hitting .312, making all the plays around short, and showing no signs of what was supposed to be a suspect throwing arm.

Before the season started, the Tigers were supposed to have good pitching. Right now, you could call it the league's best, with Rolfe six-deep in starters since the come-back of Dizzy Trout who lately got a chance and breezed through his first two jobs. They have in Art Houtteman, the first American League pitcher to win as many of seven games.

Detroit pitchers have been going the full route more consistently than any other staff in the league. They've lasted all the way in 22 of their 40 games. And in Aaron Robinson they have a .295-hitting catcher with home-run habits. Hold them up to any light, expose 'em to all angles of view, and you'd have to say the Tigers are the solid sort that could take it all.

Cards Beat Phils on Walk 5-4; Pollett Fans 3 in 9th

St. Louis, June 6 (AP).—Curt Simmons walked Johnny Lindell in the eighth to force in the winning run as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phils, 5-4, tonight. Howard Pollet struck out all three Phils to face him in the top of the ninth to gain his fifth triumph of the season.

By winning, after overcoming a 4-0 deficit, the Cardinals tied the Brooklyn Dodgers for the National League lead.

The Phils took an early lead with a four-run third inning, highlighted by Jones' triple with the bases full.

St. Louis picked up two runs in their part of the third on Marty Marion's fourth home run of the season and a single by Chuck Diering and double by Schoendienst.

Kazak tied the count in the sixth with a four-bagger, scoring behind Schoendienst who had walked.

BALLET AT FIRST BASE—With a flourish, Nats' First Baseman Irv Noren grabs a high throw from Second Baseman Cass Michaels and prances on first base to complete a double play against Aaron Robinson (ducking) of the Detroit Tigers yesterday at Griffith Stadium. Don Kolloway of the Tigers hit the liner to Michaels to set the stage for Noren's fancy one-step. The Nats lost, 11-8 ington uniform, and Hutchinson was hastily removed.

Former Nat Paul Calvert moved in and got rid of Dente on a ground ball for the second out. But he was rapped for singles by Evans and Pinch Hitter Combs, and a home run off Yost's bat would have tied the score. Yost hit no homer, as previously reported.

IN SHORT . . . The Nats haven't won a game in seven tries since trading off Robinson and Scarborough . . . A new first baseman named Fred Taylor will join the Nats in St. Louis next week. He is out of Ohio State, batted .410 in the Big Ten, is 6-3, red-headed weighs 195 and 23 years old. Scout Mike Martin signed him. He worked out before the game yesterday . . . Sid Hudson gets the task of checking the Nats' losing streak tonight, against the Indians . . . Gil Coan, who will be hospitalized for another fortnight, has been placed on the club's disabled list for 30 days . . . Bucky Harris flaunted the percentages, perhaps, when he ordered Hittle to walk Pinch Hitter Kolloway and pitch to Freddie Hutchinson in the fifth inning. Hutchison had made six hits in his last eight times at bat and promptly singled to center for two runs.

Tiger Manager Red Rolfe, ill with an attack of colitis, turned over direction of the club to Ted Lyons, and returned to his hotel.

Western's victory ended Coolidge's five-year reign as champion.

The Dawes Cup, emblematic of the championship, was presented to Western by Frank Emmet of the District Golf Association.

Luke Easter Has Double, Two Singles And Triple

New York, June 6 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians blasted the New York Yankees out of first place in the American League today, slamming out 22 hits for a 16-2 victory over the world champions.

The defeat dropped the Yankees into second lace, two percentage points behind the Detroit Tigers, who whipped the Washington Senators, 11-8. The Yanks, however, have a half game lead in the won-lost column.

Ponderous Luke Easter cracked two singles, a double and a triple to pace Cleveland's attack, which was good for 33 total bases. Joe Gordon and Jim Hegan chipped in with home runs, while Bob Kennedy connected for four singles.

Garcia Wins Second

Mike Garcia, Cleveland's husky Mexican righthander, picked up his second victory of the season and first since May 15. He has lost four times.

Joe DiMaggio accounted for New York's second run in the fourth inning with a home run into the rightfield seats—the Yankee Clipper's ninth of the year and 326th of his career.

Crowds Hold Up at Hagerstown but Betting Drops

1951 Plans Call for New Race Plant

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Hagerstown, June 6.—You can't judge a book by its cover and it's unfair to weigh the merits of Maryland's half-mile racing by the wagering. True the betting is off—considerably under last year. However, the crowds have been holding up, proving that the popularity of the sport is still high even if the pocketbooks aren't bulging as in other years.

With Delaware Park and the Rosecroft trots drawing most of the Washington business, this meeting has turned into a local area affair. Despite this fact, the per capita (per person) betting is higher here than at either the trots or the Wilmington oval.

Honeymoon's Over

It takes big betting to run race tracks. D. Eldred Rinehart, Roger E. Hershey and Merle H. Beard, the top fellows here, are not too disappointed with Hagerstown's showing. They are looking forward to next year, when 1951 rolls around they will have a new track—either six furlongs or five-eights of a mile—as well as brand new stands and a modern clubhouse.

Everyone here—along with the rest of the turf world—knows that the "honeymoon" is over as far as huge profits with little improvements are a thing of the past. They are determined to give the public real racing and wish to be rated not on the total bet but by the size of the crowds.

Sorrentino Wins Three

Today's racing wasn't exactly soul-stirring but it did provide an interesting afternoon.

D. N. Rust, jr.'s Halgino led all the way in the featured Alexandria Hotel purse.

Jockey Jimmy Baird, who smoothed out his riding while in India during the war, was up on Halgino and refused to allow the 3-year-old filly to quit. She finished two lengths ahead of Joe Paoli's Tipstaff with E. C. (Rockville) Allnutt's Smarty-Arty third. The winner paid $12.40 and was clocked in 1:21 1/5 for the 6½ furlongs.

The day's riding hero was Mike Sorrentino who piloted three straight winners. He had G. L. Stryker's Anagazandra, a $4.40 shot in the third; C. W. Davis' Chilly Blen at $8.40 in the fourth and T. H. Evans' Simon Pure in the fifth.

Art Brown Helps
Murdock Party Lands 102 Rockfish When They Surface

By Ralph Murdock

ALTHOUGH weather conditions over the weekend were anything but ideal, some excellent catches of fish were recorded Sunday afternoon. We just happened to be aboard one of the boats which had 102 rockfish.

Murdock

Incidentally, it's the first time this year that we have seen the stripers surface. Anglers, the sight was good for sore eyes.

Included in our party were Clem Markham, credit manager for Ginn's, Ed Ferrell, and a fellow named Brown—Art was his first name. The latter is a modest type of individual who only reluctantly will discuss his ability to catch the most fish on any trip. All the fish were taken on Lusby lines with no sinkers attached. The fish bit the yellow and white heads equally well.

The stripers stayed up on the surface for about an hour during which time 35 were nabbed. As soon as the rockfish sounded, a chum line was put out. The latter process availed 67 more. The largest was 2½ pounds. Skipper was Bert Lamb.

KARL HOFFMAN, Karl Hoffman, jr., Robert Carroll, Lester Thompson and Lewis Sullivan fished at Drum Island and boated 97 flounders from two to seven pounds. The "doormats" were captured by surf casting. Drum Island is located near Atlantic City. Ira Morris was the guide. The all-Washington party went out from Atlantic City.

THOMAS CRULL, 139 Irvington st. sw., and a friend picked up 18 nice hardheads at Benedict on Monday in two hours. Crull stated practically all of the boats in the area did well that day. It is our opinion that the croakers are now on the way out of Patuxent River. Several catches have been made at the Gooses, but not good enough to write home about. The bay situation should improve in the next few days as far as the hardheads are concerned.

RONNIE TOLSON, a fresh water angler journeyed to the Eastern Shore in quest of large mouth bass. On three consecutive days, he caught his limit. The big fella was a 4¾-pounder. Tolson reports that he hooked quite a few pike which he released. The Eastern Shore counties opened the bass season on June 1. Smithfield, Md., was the lucky spot for the local anglers.

Kenwood Club Wins Match

Army Navy closed its season with a 6½-2½ decision over Woodmont. Next week the host Army Navy team will draw a bye. Congressional won a 5-4 verdict over Washington Golf and Country Club.

Lee Takes European Heavy Title

By Ben Phlegar

London, June 6 (AP).—Lee Savold of Englewood, N. J., beat Bruce Woodcock of England into a bloody mass in four rounds tonight to win the British and European versions of the world heavyweight title.

A sellout crowd of 50,000 persons saw the battle, scheduled for 15 rounds, at White City Stadium. Other thousands would have come, but for police regulations limiting the crowd.

The end came for Woodcock as the bell rang for the end of the fourth round. Savold had belted the British champion savagely in the fourth, and opened a 2-inch gash over his left eye.

As blood gushed from the wound, from Woodcock's nose, and from a cut under his mouth, his seconds threw a towel into the ring when the bell sounded.

Tom Hurst, Woodcock's manager, yelled at the handler, "Pick that up." Then Hurst took a look at Bruce's eye, and called over Referee Andrew Smyth to tell him Woodcock could not go on.

Savold, five years older but in perfect condition, stood almost unmarked although he had taken four times as many punches as the 29-year-old Englishman.

The New Jersey veteran had fought the battle just as he had planned it—cool, calm and unhurried. Woodcock whipped Savold here on a foul in the fourth round December 6, 1948.

The wild-punching Woodcock, who landed at least a dozen sizzling rights to Savold's head, never once made him wince.

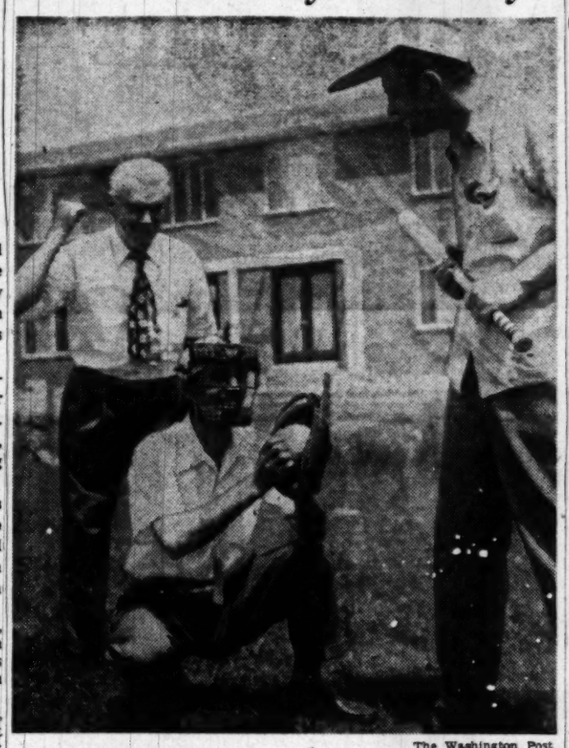
700 Members of Bench, Bar Have Annual Day in Country



The Washington Post

. . . AT HOME PLATE—Attorney Jack Reges has a harsh word for the umpire behind the plate—Judge Thomas Scalley of Municipal Court—during a soft ball game at the annual District Bar Association outing at Prince Georges Country Club. Attorney Oscar See is the catcher

The annual outing of the District Bar Association was held yesterday at the Prince Georges Golf and Country Club with 700 members of bench and bar present.

A highlight was a softball game won by the senior bar, 8-1, with Thomas David pitching and Oscar See catching. Losing junior bar battery was Edward O'Connor and William Stewart.

Other events included golf, swimming, tennis, a putting exhibition, boxing exhibition, horseshoes and dinner.

Ralph Quinter won the golf match for the third year, and retired the Roger Whiteford cup with a low gross of 74. John McClure was second, Eugene Murphy third.

First low net went to Lewis Jacobs, second to Jack Barr, third to Edward Edlowitz. C. F. Palmer had high score with 131. The driving contest was won by T. Richie Edmonston, with Hugh McGree second.

Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut of District Court reportedly established something of a judicial precedent in the judges putting contest, scoring a hole in one from about 20 feet.

Judge Armond W. Scott of Municipal Court adjourned court early yesterday with the announcement that he wasn't going to handle a number of continuances. He said he was the only judge in town not invited to the outing. Last week the District Bar Association voted not to change its bylaws to allow Negroes to enter the organization.

Sunnybrook Loses, 7-5

Randall beat out Sunnybrook, 7-5, in a Post Industrial League game yesterday on the West Ellipse. Boots Pannella, former-Maryland University pitcher, was driven from the box in the fifth inning and Al Kimball finished up for Randall, hurling one-hit shutout ball the rest of the way.

Trailer Church Class Backed Conditionally

A prposal by the Fairfax County Association of Churches to provide religious education classes for county pupils in a portable trailer-classroom was approved by the county's school board yesterday, if classes are held after school.

In approving the after-hours instruction, the school board in effect rejected a suggestion that the pupils be given time off from classes to attend the religious sessions. At the same time, it gave the chuch group permission to park its trailer - classroom on school grounds for the instruction.

The school board decision carried a provision that pupils can be enrolled in the religious classes only with the written consent of their parents. Those who elect to remain for the classes, it was pointed out, will not be able to ride home on county school buses, which start out immediately after classes are dismissed.

The church association had proposed the program as a substitute for "free-time" religious classes abandoned by school officials last year. Although the classes were not officially sponsored by the school department, they were held to be illegal because they were held in school buildings.

At yesterday's meeting, held in the school board office at Fairfax, the board decided to consult school principals, teachers and lay groups to discuss plans for school construction authorized under a $10,500,000 bond issue voted last week. Although no dates were set, board members agreed school officials and the public should be consulted on the types of schools they want built.

Dairy Offer On Hours Is Rejected By Drivers

Men Will Submit Arbitration Plan On Work Time; No Immediate Strike

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

Greater Washington milk deliverymen last night flatly rejected, by a vote of 1066 to 228, a management proposal to reduce their working hours by one day a month, instead of the 40-hour week they wanted.

Meeting at Turner's Arena drivers of nine area dairies voted to submit to management an offer of arbitration on the working hours question only, setting Saturday midnight as a dealine.

A spokesman for the union, Local 246 of the Milk Drivers' and Dairy Employes' Union (AFL Teamsters), said if management refuses to arbitrate the drivers will strike. The union has 1650 members.

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Only the question of working hours is at stake in renewal of a contract which expired at 12:01 a. m. today.

Federal Mediator Henry Baker said he understood last night's action by the union marked the first time in Washington area dairy negotiations that a union committee's acceptance of a management proposal has been rejected by the full membership.

The union originally demanded a 40-hour, five-day work week for the same wages paid for a 48-hour, six-day week under the contract. After negotiations all day yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel, the dairies offered to reduce the working time by one day per month for the first year, and by two days per month for the second year of a two-year contract, plus other concessions.

Eugene R. Hubbard, business agent of the union, and Harry J. Marx, president, returned to a midnight conference with management after the membership rejected the companies' proposal. The union made its report and the conference adjourned, to meet at noon today.

Marx told a reporter immediately after the midnight session convened that "it doesn't look like there'll be any strike, at least before Saturday."

Another meeting of the union at Turner's Arena was scheduled for Friday night, when officials will report on the progress of further negotiations.

No Proof Of Dishonesty At Gallinger

Bookkeeping Cited As Inefficient In Health Dept. Report on Drugs

An audit of Gallinger Hospital accounts, touched off by a District Court trial last March, showed "very inaccurate" bookkeeping but no proof of theft, it was announced yesterday.

According to a report given District Commissioners yesterday by District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger, the hospital's books show a $10,431.61 shortage of "wonder drugs" over a two-year period. The report was released by Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young.

Paper Shortages

The audit report pointed out certain bookkeeping errors which produced "paper shortages," but also concluded that "unexplainable losses may have occurred." It stated further that: "It would be impossible to prove anyone guilty of theft from our audit findings."

The audit was made by two of Seckinger's fiscal aides, V. Wendell Doll, budget analyst and accountant, and Norman W. Pierson, fiscal accountant. It followed conviction of James W. Kinard, pharmacist's aide at the hospital, on a charge of stealing chloromycetin, and statements at his trial that the hospital could not account for large amounts of drugs.

Doll and Pierson audited accounts at the hospital storeroom dealing with drugs.

In some cases, they reported, the books showed an overissue rather than a shortage. For instance, the pharmacy books showed it handed out more streptomycin than it received from the storeroom. In most cases, however, the discrepancies were on the short side. The storeroom, for example, could not account for 2820 vials, each containing three million units of penicillin, the report stated.

The report noted that the supply officer at Gallinger had asked for, but could not be given, additional personnel to handle supplies.

Not Correctly Kept

It concluded in this fashion:

"The fact that substantial overissues were found in the storeroom records leads inescapably to the conclusion that the records were not correctly kept. Since this is so, it would almost follow that the shortages were also paper shortages existing only in the records—except for the fact that the shortages are four times the overages. Thus it must be concluded that although the records were not properly maintained, unexplainable losses also may have occurred . . ."

Seckinger said yesterday it appeared that the apparent shortages were "just the result of sloppy bookkeeping." He said he had acted to correct the situation by requiring all health department institutions to submit monthly reports giving an accounting of supplies.

Acting District Auditor Frank M. Hally said his office had conducted a simultaneous survey of Gallinger and found "an awful lot of confusion," but no evidence of theft. A report recommending new procedures is now being prepared for the Commissioners, he stated.

Guffey Sees President

Joseph Guffey, former Democratic Senator from Pennsylvania, visited President Truman yesterday at the White House. He declined to discuss the purpose of his call.

Nuptials Delayed

Bride Jailed For Soliciting Prostitution

A 30-year-old waitress languished in District jail last night, waiting for her fiance to pay a fine imposed because she solicited prostitution the day she was to be married.

Shirley Ann Biggs, a brunette waitress from Norfolk, Va., told Judge Armond Scott in Municipal Court that she had solicited two men in the 1100 block of 11th st. nw. early yesterday because they were "so extra nice" . . . and she needed money to marry.

Alas, the men turned out to be Vice Squad Officers Louis Fouchett and A. A. Ciotola.

When Judge Scott imposed a $25 fine, or 30 days, her fiance appeared before the court, produced what he said was a marriage certificate and asked for a smaller fine. He said he didn't believe he could raise $25 immediately.

"I'm only making the fine that small," said Judge Scott, "because she has no record and because she plans to get married."

By 4 p. m., when the fine clerk's office closed, the fiance had been unable to raise the fine. Miss Biggs was to have been married at 6 p. m.—but instead was sent to the District jail.

Police Return Training School Girls Who Fled

One of the policemen had his shirt torn off during the tussle.

The girls walked off the grounds via the Industrial Training School annex and resisted the blandishments of two Training School counselors to return.

One of the counselors called police when the girls were trailed to a bus stop on MacArthur blvd., near Manning st. nw. Subsequent calls brought a total of four scout cars, one roving corporal, one roving lieutenant, and one police wagon to the scene.

Larkin Acts For Juvenile Court Aides

Intake Supervisor Takes Over Duties Of Two Officials Who Quit Posts

John Larkin, supervisor of intake at Juvenile Court, has been designated to fill temporarily the position of two key officials of the court who recently resigned, it was learned yesterday.

The resigned officials are Misses Virginia Clary, the court's social service director, and Miss Clare Fagrie, supervisor of probation. Their successors have not been designated.

In resigning, they told Judge Edith H. Cockrill they disagreed with her methods of handling cases as being punitive in nature, rather than designed to rehabilitate juvenile offenders. Judge Cockrill replied she had asked Miss Clary to resign because of "inefficiency."

Meanwhile, Judge Cockrill has four staff members compiling figures on cases which will show, she says, the true picture of the court situation. She said yesterday that she will make no further comment until the statistics are in final shape.

Misses Clary and Fagrie could not be reached for comment.

On Thursday, the Juvenile Court Advisory Committee will meet under the direction of former Assistant Secretary of State, G. H. Howland Shaw, who has long been interested in welfare affiairs here.

He was out of town yesterday, but Attorney Roger Robb, a member of the committee declared:

"It would be incredible if we did not discuss the entire court situation as it has developed recently, at the Thursday meeting."

Columbia Hgts. Group Backs Judge Cockrill

An expression of confidence in the administration of Juvenile Court Judge Edith Cockrill was adopted last night by the Columbia Heights Citizens Association.

The resolution, voted at a meeting in the Columbia Heights Christian Church Hall, praised Judge Cockrill for "recognizing that juvenile repeaters should be punished, not glorified."

The group reelected Mrs. Ernest W. Howard to her sixth successive term as president. Others elected were R. R. Stratton, first vice president; Joseph Lapiana, second vice president; and George H. Brown, and Mrs. Howard, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. The executive committee will appoint a secretary.

Ruling Asked On Importing Of Milk Here

District Commissioners yesterday sought advice on the legality of an activity they have permitted for eight years — importation of milk from farms not inspected by the District Health Department.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, who was asked to look up the law, said the question had not been presented to him before, although the Commissioners have allowed such importation to supplement local supplies since 1942.

The question of legality was raised last week by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) at a Commissioners' hearing on whether imported milk should be banned. Unless the Commissioners extend an existing order, imported milk will not be permitted to enter the city after June 30.

District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger, who met with the Commissioners yesterday, said he discussed milk regulations with the Commissioners in anticipation of a Senate hearing Thursday. Commissioner John Russell Young and other District officials have been summoned by Senator Guy M. Gillette (D., Iowa) to a hearing on various dairy industry problems, including barriers to interstate movement of milk.

Arlington Group Seeks School Bonds

Civic Federation Asks Board for Issue In Fall on County Construction Needs

The Arlington County Civic Federation last night asked the School Board to prepare to submit to the public a bond issue for school construction needs in November, if possible.

The federation resolution did not include an amount for the issue, but its schools committee, in recommending the issue, suggested an eight-to-nine million-dollar issue to cover needs in the next two years.

The committee said this would provide 50 elementary classrooms in the two years, a new junior high school by the fall of 1951 and a senior high school by the fall of 1952. It recommended the bond issue as "the cheapest and quickest way to get the money for this program."

The federation, meeting in the Lyons Park Community House, indorsed a report by its community planning committee urging that school needs be given top priority in the county's expansion program.

Last month the Arlington County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations recommended holding a referendum on a proposed $8,700,000 bond issue for school construction.

The federation's school committee received questions submitted by Mrs. Miriam Murtha, a delegate, on continuing school segregation. These queries will be considered by the committee for further report:

"1. Is it possible in the light of the recent Supreme Court decisions to continue the segregation of students in Arlington senior and junior high school and elementary schools?

"2. Should the federation go on record in favor of early abandonmen of segregation in schools in Arlington?"

The federation indorsed a recommendation that the county assess real estate at 100 percent of true value, instead of the present 40 percent. This would help the county obtain a lower rate of interest on future bond issues, proponents declared.

By a voice vote, the federation rejected a resolution to discuss D. C. home rule.

Relief Rolls Reach 8-Year High Point

More District residents are now receiving public assistance than at any time since the start of the war, Raymond L. Clapp, acting District Welfare Director, said yesterday.

In April, the department handled 6787 relief cases, involving 13,236 individuals, Clapp said. Forty-seven cases were added in May and he estimated 13,500 persons would receive welfare aid this month.

The smallest number of cases handled during any one month in the past decade was 3901 in November, 1946, Clapp said. It has not been as high as 6800 since April, 1942.

Relief categories include old age, blind, dependent children and needy families.

Clapp said the greatest postwar increase has come in the dependent children category. He sees it, however, not as an abnormal increase, but a "return to normal conditions."

He explains it this way: During the war, men in the service were required to make allotments for support of their families, and special arrangements were made to permit mothers to accept war jobs.

In one category, old age assistance, the request for aid has declined in the last decade, Clapp said. He attributed this to the fact that more old persons are now eligible for pensions, and also because the department's requirements for relief eligibility have been tightened.

Because of its ever-increasing case load, the Welfare Department has been forced to cut its assistance a total of 20 percent this year. A deficiency bill seeking to regain the most recent 8 percent cut is now before Congress.

12,000 Fun-Making Prophets Convene Here at Two Hotels

The Washington Post

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

One of Washington's biggest conventions of the year tunes up today as 12,000 members of the Mystic Order Veiled Prophets of the Enchanted Realm take over at the Mayflower and Statler.

The prophets represent 221 grottoes from 46 States, Canada and the Canal Zone. This branch of Masonic order is devoted to two causes: Fun with a gargantuan F, and the financing of cerebral palsy clinics and hospitals.

The four-day whirl will include stuntmen, contests, band and choral concerts, and a parade on Constitution ave.

Top-flight event today is a fete at the Statler, starting at 7 p. m. with a banquet, followed by "elaborate entertainment," followed by the Grand Monarch's Ball. Guest speaker at the banquet will be Representative Walter Horan (R., Wash.).

Today's events will start unreeling at 10 a. m. when Grand Monarch Frank B. Jones of Youngstown, Ohio, visits Mount Vernon to place a wreath on the Tomb of Washington.

Grand Monarch Jones then will journey to the George Washington National Masonic Memorial at Alexandria and place another wreath on the statue of Washington there. He also will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington.

Registration opens at noon at both the Statler and Mayflower. Delegates and past Monarchs will register at the Statler. General registration of Prophets will be at the Mayflower.

Thursday comes the public opening of the Supreme Council session at 9:30 a. m. at the Statler.

Then at 1:30 p. m. the Grotto units will parade down Constitution ave. from 3d to 17th st.

A ceremonial by the Sahara Grotto cast of Indianapolis will follow in the Presidential Ballroom at the Statler.

The stunt men will go into action with their revels in a contest at 6 p. m. at the Statler.

The Prophets will stage pregame ceremonies at the Washington-Cleveland ball game at 8 p. m. Thursday at Griffith Stadium. A trophy will be presented to Lou Boudreau, Cleveland manager.

Also set for Thursday night at 8:30 is a music session with Grotto band and choral groups at the Jefferson Memorial. Guest artist will be Susan Reed, ballad singer, who recently made her first motion picture, "Glamour Girl."

On Friday a Supreme Council session with election of officers is set for 9:30 a.m. at the Statler. The official Supreme Council contests are ticketed for 1:30 p.m.—drill corps and drum corps at the South Ellipse; bands in the Statler's Presidential Room; choral groups in the Almas Temple ballroom.

Another Supreme Council session will be held at 2:30 p.m. in the George Washington National Masonic Memorial auditorium in Alexandria.

Grotto night will be observed at 8:15 p.m. Friday at Rosecroft harness track, Oxon Hill, Md., with a special Grotto cup race.

Installation of officers will take place at the final session of the Supreme Council at 9:30 a. m. Saturday.

Adm. Dewey's Kin Quits in Eviction Row

The grand-nephew of Admiral George Dewey ran up the white flag in Municipal Court yesterday and ended a two-year fight against eviction.

Edward B. Dewey surrendered his 10-room, 4-bath apartment at 2500 Massachusetts ave. nw. to Mrs. Shannon Clark, wife of Admiral Joseph J. (Jocko) Clark.

Mrs. Clark bought the $200,000 Embassy Row apartment house more than two years ago and has been trying to evict Dewey ever since. She first wanted to make the apartment a cooperative, but now intends to occupy Dewey's apartment herself.

Dewey agreed to vacate by July 1. Through his attorney, Roy B. Kelley, Dewey said the recent death of his father made it unnecessary for him to retain the apartment.

The consent agreement also provided that Dewey place $4500 in escrow, pending settlement of a suit brought against Admiral Clark by a Miss Selma Sinclair. She charges she was assaulted by Admiral Clark while trying to enter the Dewey apartment

Runaway

Boy Scout Not Prepared For Quiz

The long, long trail of adventure ended at 8th and D sts. nw. early yesterday for a runaway 11-year-old Boy Scout from Maspeth, Long Island, N. Y.

His trouble was that he ran into Pvt. Howard R. Cohea, of the First Precinct—a man curiously familiar with Boy Scout affairs.

The youngster, Hans Dethlessen, told Cohea that he was on his way to Norfolk, Va., to embark for a Scout Jamboree in France.

Cohea, recalling that last year was when the Jamboree was held decided that the youngster was not abiding by the very first injunction of the Scout Oath: "A Scout is trustworthy. . . ."

He took the youngster to the Women's Bureau, and then to the Receiving Home. At each stopover, the boy told some highly ingenious whoppers.

His father was notified and Hans, police said, will be kept at the Receiving Home until his father arrives.

County Democrats Lead GOP 2 to 1 In Registrations

Democrats are leading Republicans by more than two to one in new voter registrations in Montgomery County, Ward W. Caddington, Democratic registrar, reported.

Since January 1, 1368 Democrats and 546 Republicans have been registered. J. Bond Smith, county chairman, said that the ratio is "the best indicator of what is going to happen in November."

Democratic Party workers are preparing to start "Operation Doorbell," Smith said. Workers will make a door-to-door canvass to persuade new voters to register before the June 24 deadline. Included in the plans is "schooling" for workers to teach the latest successful door-to-door campaigning methods, Smith said.

Benning Square Dance

A square dance sponsored by the Benning School Parent-Teachers Association will be held at 8 p. m. today on the school grounds, located at Minnesota ave. between Benning rd. and Foote st. ne.

Drivers Advised Sweet Smile Softens Arresting Policemen

Assistant Police Superintendent Arthur E. Miller—and old hand on the vagaries of District motorists—tossed out these thoughts yesterday:

A sweet smile, pretty face and a cooperative attitude still register with arresting officers. Cops, after all, are humans.

The former head of the Metropolitan Police Traffic Division was talking to the D. C. Advisory Board of the American Automobile Association at the season's final meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

He gave this example:

Two people drive through a red light. One gets irritable, says he's busy and asks the copy why he doesn't go after the holdup men and the murderers, instead of wasting his time on him. The other persons smiles sweetly and is thoroughly cooperative.

"Now which one of the two do you think is going to get locked up?" Miller asked his listeners.

In a brief business session, the AAA advisory board unanimously adopted a parking committee resolution which urged the District and Federal governments to give "immediate attention" to authorizing three downtown parking projects.

The projects, to be built under financing are:

1. A multi-story parking garage on the site of Western Market, 21st and K sts. nw.

2. A surface and underground parking area, at the Grand Plaza, on 14h st. nw., south of the District Building.

3. A 2000-car capacity parking facility at the site of the present Civil Service Building, between 7th and 9th, F and G sts. nw.

End of Child Care Units Approved by House Group

D. C. Subcommittee Votes 3-2 Against Senate's Bill for Permanent Centers

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A House District subcommittee voted 3 to 2 yesterday to end the District child day care center program June 30, but Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) disclosed later a new move may be made to extend the project for another year.

The vote to end the centers came during an unscheduled executive meeting in the office of Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.), subcommittee chairman. The action turned down the Senate-approved bill to make the day care centers a permanent District program. The law authorizing their operation expires June 30. The subcommittee decision was announced through William N. McLeod, jr., District Committee clerk.

For Gradual Shutdown

While sidetracking the Senate bill, the Abernethy group instructed McLeod to confer with District Welfare Department officials about ways to extend the day care center program, with the idea of bringing it gradually to an end, perhaps by the end of this year.

Later, however, Representative McMillan, who is chairman of the full House District Committee, said members were beginning to discuss another year's extension of the program.

Both McMillan and Abernethy indicated the issue probably would be taken up in the next meeting of the District Committee, which McMillan expects to call soon. Abernethy said he would report the action of the subcommittee at the session.

Granger For Extension

Representative Walter K. Granger (D., Utah), who voted in yesterday's meeting for the Senate bill, said he would seek in the next District Committee meeting to gain an extension of the program.

He said he felt the centers serve a good purpose. There are six centers, serving about 280 children, financed with $100,000 in District funds and $48,000 more in fees paid by parents.

Abernethy said he feels the centers are not a proper function of Government, but should be operated as a Community Chest project. He said groups favoring the centers were put on notice a year ago that this was to be the last year of the centers, but have not done a thing "except to pressurize Congress."

Mrs. Irene Raine, chairman of the mothers' committee for the centers, said closing would force many mothers to go on relief.

District Faces High Humidity

Lay in a stock of fresh linen, folks. Wilting Washington will wilt awhile longer, the National Airport weatherman predicts from his air-conditioned den.

Today will be like yesterday, only worse. The temperature may not spurt any higher than the 88 recorded as yesterday's maximum, but the humidity will probably go on a small tear.

The humidity percentage yesterday got no higher than the comfortable 30s.

Bright sunlight, the weatherman says, should stick around until Thursday when clouds, with more humidity, are expected to goo up the heat.

To Address Lutherans

Dr. Conrad Bergendoff, president of Augustana College, Rock Island, Ill., will speak at a luncheon meeting of the Lutheran Laymen's Fellowship at 12:30 p. m. Thursday in the Congressional Room of the Willard Hotel, 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Commissioners to Ask $51,000 To Maintain Upshur Hospital

District Commissioners yesterday agreed to ask Congress for $51,000 to repair Upshur Street Hospital and keep it open as a rehabilitation center for tuberculosis patients.

They acted on the urging of District Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger, who last month had indorsed a recommendation that it be closed because funds were not available for repairs.

Dr. Philip A. E. Stebbing, superintendent of Gallinger Hospital, had recommended closing the institution at 14th and Upshur sts. nw., after the District Architect's office urged prompt replacement of the heating system's boiler at a cost of $41,000.

In his report, Stebbing noted that previous requests for repairs had been cut from the department's budget.

Seckinger altered his stand after a meeting with interested groups including the Tuberculosis Association of the District. At that time he announced he felt the hospital should be kept open at least until other facilities are available.

Arguments advanced for continuing operation of Upshur Street Hospital were that trips to Glenn Dale Sanitorium for rehabilitation treatment would be exhausting to patients and that total lack of treatment would mean even more overcrowding at Glenn Dale.

Seckinger yesterday said records show relapses occur in 40 to 60 percent of cases where no rehabilitation facilities are available. With use of Upshur Street Hospital facilities the figure has been kept down to 25 percent here, he stated.

If repair funds are not voted, the District will continue to operate Upshur Street Hospital "as long as we can" anyhow, Seckinger said. Archie Hutson, director of construction for the District, had reported the boiler did not present a safety hazard. It operates inefficiently and will grow worse, he said.

Deputy District Budget Officer William G. Wilding said the $51,000 will probably be sought as a supplemental item to the 1951 appropriation bill now before the Senate.

48 Girls Graduated At Cathedral School

From Prep School

Woman, 49, And Man, 57, Graduated

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Academic processions, words of encouragement and advice, and the awarding of diplomas marked graduation exercises held by Washington schools yesterday.

In the great choir of Washington Cathedral, the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, presented diplomas to the 48 capped and gowned graduates of the National Cathedral School for Girls.

"These memberships — school, college, family, Nation, church — are the seed plots out of which our individual lives grow," Bishop Dun said. "And likewise they are the great forms of human relationship into which our lives must enter if we are to live our full part.

"A nation to be safe and sound needs centers where men and women who are freed from the pressure of political interest can seek and share truth with minds open and unafraid."

Mt. Vernon College

Dean Harry J. Carman, Columbia College, Columbia University, speaking to the 59 graduates of Mount Vernon Junior College in exercises at the Metropolitan Methodist Church, declared that first of all man needs to take inventory of himself.

Emerson Institute

Seventy-nine graduates of the Emerson Institute heard Dr. Charles C. Tansill, professor of American history and diplomacy at Georgetown University, speak on "Challenge of Tomorrow" in exercises at the Wardman Park.

Contemporary Arts

The Institute of Contemporary Arts presented a recital of student musical compositions in exercises at the school, 1322 New York ave. nw. Graduation certificates were presented to Daniel Brockhuizen, painting; Clara Koo, graphics; Kenneth Noland, painting; William Taylor, pottery; Edwin Trimmer and Eustace Mullins, writing, and Russell Foster, theater arts.

Graduation Today

Graduation exercises for 49 students from the Woodward School will be held at 5 p. m. today in the Department of Interior Auditorium. Dr. Ernest Stacy Griffith of the Library of Congress, will speak.

Commencement for 47 graduates of the Georgetown Visitation Convent Preparatory School will be held at 11 a. m. at the school. The junior college will graduate 35 students at 4 p. m.

Southeastern University will confer degrees on 219 students at 8 p. m. in the Department of Interior Auditorium.

Sir Oliver Franks, Ambassador from Great Britain, will deliver the commencement address at Sidwell Friends School at 7:30 p. m. in the garden of Grayson House, 3825 Wisconsin ave. nw. Fifty-two students will receive diplomas.

Seventeen students will be graduated from Maret School in exercises at 8:30 p. m. at the Shoreham Hotel.

Woman, 49, Is Graduated

When the Emerson Institute handed out high school diplomas last night, two of the more mature recipients were: A 57-year-old Government clerk who wanted to be a meat inspector and a 49-year-old Government stenographer who just thinks people "should have more schooling."

And that isn't all. Both hope to go on to college in the fall.

The frustrated meat inspector is Orville R. Phillips of 917 Maple ave. (formerly Park st.), Rockville, Md. When he came to Washington in 1941, after a lifetime as a butcher, he took the Civil Service examination for meat inspector.

The result? They made him a Veterans' Administration clerk. He's there today, in the payees accounts section of the finance division.

Born in Ottumwa, Iowa, Phillips served overseas with the Army in World War I, enlisted in the Coast Guard in the last war.

Before enrolling at Emerson, he had reached only the eighth grade. Why the delayed reversion to education? Says Phillips: "I saw a job at VA in a higher grade. It required a high school diploma. So here I am." He hopes to go on to George Washington University in the fall to specialize in personnel work. He is married with three grown children.

"They all went to high school," he emphasizes.

As for the other mature graduate, Mrs. Nettie Dunavan of 1525 28th st. se., she simply "felt the need of an education." She's employed as a secretary for the Agriculture Department, has been in the Government since 1928, and is an honor student at Emerson.

Mrs. Dunavan, whose husband, Homer, is a grocery store manager, was born in Harrisonburg, Va., finished her first year of high school and then went to business school.

At Emerson, she got an "A" in accounting, hopes to go to Benjamin Franklin University in the fall to continue in that field.

National Hadassah Head Asks Arms for Israel

MRS. ROSE HALPRIN, national president of Hadassah, yesterday asked the U. S. Government to fulfill its "moral burden" to give Israel arms.

She charged that Great Britain broke faith with the United States and France almost before the ink was dry on their agreement announced May 25, in which they pledged to ship limited quantities of arms to Middle Eastern countries for defense purposes. Unofficial British statements since then have indicated that requests for arms from Israel would be pigeon-holed, she said, while Arab states would continue to get them.

"Only if Israel is armed is peace in the Near East assured," Mrs. Halprin said. The United States deserves commendation for taking the initiative in the matter of the agreement, but it is now necessary for us to shoulder the additional burden of supplying arms since Great Britain will not, she believes.

Mrs. Halprin, only woman member of the executive board of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, who just returned from meetings in Israel, made her declaration at the twenty-ninth annual spring luncheon and installation of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah held at the Mayflower.

She also expressed the belief that any attempt to internationalize the holy city of Jerusalem will be a failure unless UN appoints supervisors to control it.

Mrs. Halprin described some of her experiences in Israel, including the first anniversary celebration of the Hadassah-supported medical school in Jerusalem.

Mrs. Benjamin Manchester, president of the Washington Chapter, gave a report on the past year's activities which included the raising of $133,000 for Hadassah work in Israel, and the making and shipping of thousands of garments.

A style show of dresses from Israel, pointing up the work of the Fashion Institute there, was put on by members of Hadassah with clothing lent by staff members and wives of staff members of the Israeli Embassy. The Fashion Institute and a hotel management school are among the educational institutions supported by Hadassah in Israel.

Models were Mrs. Morris Kaufman, Mrs. Allan Widome, Harold Cain and Mrs. David Linowes.

New officers installed by Mrs. Samuel Lubin, past president of the Seaboard Region, are Mrs. Manchester, president; Mrs. Cecil Kaufman, Mrs. Alex Hassan and Mrs. Serge Rips, vice presidents; Mrs. William Oshinsky, treasurer; Mrs. Meyer M. Silverman, assistant treasurer; Mrs. Joseph Kaurman, financial secretary; Mrs. Meyer Greenberg, recording secretary; Mrs. Mark Smith, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Jack Chernikoff, administrative secretary, and Mrs. Emanuel Cohen and Mrs. Aaron H. Gerber, trustees.

Beautiful Miss Washington Will Get Chance to Exercise Brains

SOMETHING new has been added to the boxcar of loot that the prettiest girl in Washington will receive this year. The Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce, which will join Station WWDC this year in sponsoring the annual Miss Washington contest, will give a $500 scholarship. The scholarship may be used for any college or professional school the winner chooses.

In the past, prizes have been given to Miss Washington, but she was not eligible for a scholarship unless she placed among the top 13 in the Miss America contest in Atlantic City.

Quite apart from the scholarship, the winner, who will be selected August 14 at the Sesquicentennial Amphitheater now being built in Rock Creek Park, will get $5000 worth of prizes including an automobile, a diamond wrist watch, luggage, a complete wardrobe, shoes and furs.

But even more important are the intangibles that go with being Miss Washington. She is the official Washington hostess at such civic affairs as the Cherry Blossom Festival, as well as representing the District in the Miss America contest in Atlantic City. The 1949 Miss Washington, Miss Mary Jane Hayes, also represented the United States in a beauty festival in Lima, Peru.

Jody Miller, the 1948 winner, is now singing with the Statler Hotel chain, and has been a night club, radio and television star in Washington. Miss Hayes is now in New York being screen tested by a major Hollywood studio.

This is the first year in which the Washington Junior Chamber of Commerce has participated in the contest.

Contestants must be single girls between the ages of 18 and 28, who are graduates of high school or are in their senior year. They must live in, or be employed in or attending school in the District, to qualify.

Official entry blanks are available at WWDC, 1627 K st. nw., the Junior Chamber of Commerce offices in the Washington Star Building, Brooks Photographers at 1327 F st. nw., and at the stores of merchants who offer prizes in the contest. Preliminary judging will take place at WWDC the first week in July. Three semifinals will follow at the Atlas, Naylor and Apex Theaters in July and August.

Contestants will be given training and rehearsals for the contest by staff members of WWDC starting June 12, and contestants are urged to register early to receive as much training as possible.

3. "Mother's set in her ways, but even she was sold when I showed her how beautifully my daughter's little dresses ironed—how clear and crisp the colors looked! No-Rinse Surf will be a family affair from now on!"

Netherlands Envoy Says Big Farewell

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

"I'M AS excited as a school boy," said Eelco Van Kleffens, Ambassador of the Netherlands, who is soon to begin his first vacation in 11 years. Yesterday the Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens said farewell to many of their friends at the reception given in their honor by members of the Netherlands-America Foundation. After their vacation, they will move to another diplomatic post.

The party was held at the home of Clarence Aspinwall, chairman of the foundation, and Mrs. Aspinwall. Guests were received from 5:30 to 7 p. m. in their beautiful garden which joins the garden of the Afghanistan Embassy on 24th st.

When the Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens leave Washington next week, they are going West to Salt Lake City, Utah, to say farewell to Mme. van Kleffen's family. They will travel on to the coast from there, and take a ship for home from San Francisco.

"The ship doesn't stop at all until we reach Holland," said the Ambassador with obvious pleasure. "She'll go slowly through the Panama Canal, of course, but no stops." In all, he judged, the voyage would take 21 days.

Mme. Van Kleffens wore a cool white and Navy blue print with broad brimmed Navy straw, for yesterday's fete, and Mrs. Aspinwall was in a honey-colored satin frock pinned at the shoulder with yellow orchids.

It was also Admiral and Mrs. Stevens' thirty-second wedding anniversary, and the thirty-second anniversary of Admiral Stevens' graduation from the Naval Academy at Annapolis. To celebrate the dual occasion Admiral and Mrs. Stevens had sent out invitations for a reunion of Annapolis classmates at the Army Navy Country Club and for the dozen or so friends on duty at the American Embassy in Moscow when Admiral Stevens was Naval Attache there, who are now back in Washington.

The wedding plans of Miss Carroll and Mr. Stevens were changed in order that the ceremony could take place on his parents, anniversary, and so the party at the club by turn of events was also a wedding reception.

Man Is Having Clandestine Meetings With Girl Whose Husband Mistreats Her; And Although He Says He's Good Samaritan, He Feels Defensive

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am interested in a lovely girl, married some years, whose husband has never bought her a dress or shoes. He pawned her wedding ring the first week of marriage. He has knocked out two of her front teeth and won't provide money to have them replaced. I knew the baboon before they married, when there was no indication this metamorphosis would take place. Full details of his ugly behavior are unprintable.

Alla is emotionally and physically ill, with medical aid harshly opposed by her spouse, but she says "I'll stick. I married him. Don't forget the children." Here is a woman with the same emotional drives as those who have better luck in marriage. On what grounds would you censure us, or penalize her, when I tell you that we are meeting clandestinely of recent weeks?

I know I provide her that measure of happiness, something to live for, that will insure her children a dear, sweet mother, when otherwise she was failing fast. Each unaccustomed smile I bring to her face, each twinkle to eyes long dimmed by sorrow and tears, are of transcendant importance to me, beyond any question of ethics or any "nice" rules of morality laid down, not by God, but by some arrogant human, as permitting "no exception."

Are Group Mores Very Important?

FOR ALLA'S sake, and the children's, of course, not at all for my own, I keep our meetings as hidden as I can. Tale bearers wouldn't understand our companionship, for they don't know the story nor the fact that her husband would care least of all. And you can see the futility and complications of her trying to leave the brute and get a job in her rundown condition. It may come later, although divorce is not obtainable in this jurisdiction.

I am not trying to whitewash myself. I confess I am selfish, in that I enjoy every moment in her company. Not only do I admire her greatly, but I adore her for her own sweet sake. But conventions and churchism won't let us be respectable, and right there is where I part company with "group mores" without one qualm. As a man, that's my slant. What is yours? Just how important is adherence to these things?

G. R.

Unhappy Woman Courts Misery

DEAR G. R.: In condensing your letter, I've combed quite a bit of rant out of it. But in the original, it was a highfalutin' self-justifying document, in which you were making verbal war on the reprehensible husband, on Madame Grundy and on Christian concepts of wholesome behavior.

As I get the story, Alla and her husband have a low order of affinity for each other, and you are a kindred temperament, too, in that each of you has a neurotic predilection for morbid company, when intimate association is desired. That is why you feel set against group mores; also why you've drifted together.

It appears that Alla is the masochist type, who doesn't feel worthy of human companionship on decent terms, and who also entertains tremendous hostility towards the opposite sex, as well as much guilty self-condemnation. Impelled by this negative, pessimist complex, the masochist tends to make damaging affiliations, to team up with a brute or sadist, and to cling to martyrdom, as if this were a necessary price to pay for sharing closeness to anybody.

Martyr Triumphs Over Persecutor

NOT consciously, but yet relentlessly, the masochist takes revenge on the tyrant, however. This is accomplished, as Alla's sad story indicates, by evoking the most evil reactions from the overtly dominant party, and indirectly disclosing these and the subject's injuries to appalled bystanders, who generally pity the "victim," of course. Thus the masochist achieves a martyr's distinction, while reducing the despot to incomparably meaner rank, in the popular estimate. From the neurotic's angle, this is a triumph of sorts.

Alla's problem is not her husband primarily, nor do community tale bearers or rules of respectability enter in, really. What she is up against is her own severely warped character, which causes her to embrace and perpetuate a destructive conjugal relationship. This same unfortunate bias also accounts for her acceptance of your selfish desire to have her company without delay on a bootleg basis, and without sure intent to care for her honorably, now or in future.

So what's the use haggling about churchism, etc., as if that had anything to do with your loss of direction, or Alla's either. Adherence to conventional mores is important, for the reason that any individual's mental health and social weal are largely dependent on group acceptance and popular approval. Without wholesome affiliations and a fine feeling of self respect (that requires no embattled defensiveness, such as you are showing here) you can't be happy. Thus my advice is to stop fighting your conscience and face the fact that you're on the wrong track.

Paint—Then Powder—Anne Advises, To Give Your Garden Furniture That Antique Green-Bronze Look

DEAR ANNE:

Will you kindly tell me what paint mixture is used to give garden furniture that antique green-bronze look. I do not seem to be able to achieve it.

Mrs. L. S., Washington.

You should be able to attain a satisfactory finish of this type after a little experimenting with the following method: First, apply dark Pompeian green paint to the furniture. When it is almost dry—still just a little "tacky"—dust or blow on copper-bronze powder by putting a bit on a piece of paper, then literally blowing it on the surface of the paint. Concentrate on the more ornate curlicues to give a shaded effect. After the paint is fully dry, dust off the residue.

DEAR ANNE:

I have a hand crocheted ecru table cloth which has faded in spots. It is a beautiful thing and I would like to restore it to its original color. Do you know of any way this can be done?

M. E. P., Washington.

Old-fashioned way of tinting things ecru was with tea or weak coffee. However, a surer and more modern method is with the ecru tint sold by manufacturers of home dyes. This is taking it for granted that you make it a practice to launder the table cloth.

Wash it as usual then tint and rinse according to instructions on package. Dry on curtain stretchers, if you have these in the necessary size, or put the tablecloth over a line and stretch it in both the length and the width. If possible, do this several times during the drying.

If the spots aren't too much lighter than the rest of the cloth, the over-all dipping should obscure them. If they still stand out, you might touch them up with a brush dipped in the dye, but this would have to be skillfully done.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to restore a veil on a hat? It is a rather fine mesh and has gotten very limp and droopy.

D. G., Washington.

Quick way to return the crispness to veiling is to place it between two pieces of wax paper and run a warm iron over it. Let dry thoroughly before handling.

Another way to make it sprightly again is with gum arabic. Dissolve 1 teaspoonful (available in powdered form at drug stores) in 1/3 cup hot water. Wait until gum dissolves. It may take quite a while. Dip veil in solution and then spread it out, pulling and shaping, to dry on Turkish towel. When dry, press lightly and carefully with warm iron.

DEAR ANNE:

Where can I get a booklet containing information on removal of stains such as mildew, iron rust, and the like from clothing? G. W. A., Arlington, Va.

You can get such a bulletin by sending 10 cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D. C. Ask for "Stain Removal From Fabrics—Home Methods," Farmer's Bulletin No. 1474, issued by the Department of Agriculture.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

'Darling of the Klondike' . Spurs Washington Arts

By Ellen Buell Parry

THE CHAIRMAN of the Arts and Letters Society scholarship benefit to be held at the Shoreham Hotel tomorrow afternoon, dainty, blond Mrs. Emil Hurja, has been personally engaged in arts and letters all of her life.

MRS. HURJA

She started singing and dancing at benefits as a golden-haired child in Dawson, the Yukon territory, where her father, a large mining operator, took her to live during babyhood. Being one of the few white children in the region, she was the darling of the Klondike and the pet of the Northwest Mounted Police.

In Seattle later, she studied music and attended the University of Washington where she participated in musicals and theatricals. She majored in journalism at college and contributed to the university paper. It was there she met her future husband, the editor of the school daily. After graduation, she became a reporter, feature writer and society editor of the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

Married to Hurja, she pioneered with him to the oil boom town of Breckenridge, Tex., and assisted him in starting a newspaper, the Breckenridge Daily American. Later they lived in California and in New York where she served as an apprentice in Eva La Gallienne's Civic Repertory Theater Company for a time.

In 1933 Emil Hurja came to Washington as an assistant to Jim Farley, and held several key jobs before his retirement from politics in 1937. Music and writing have continued to be his wife's main interests, although she has in addition become a leader in the Capital's social and charitable circles.

For her work in getting foster parents for Finnish children and raising funds for the widows of Finland during the Russian-Finnish War, she was honored with the highest decoration that can be given a woman by the Finnish government, the White Rose of Finland.

At the request of Historian Mary Beard, wife of the late Charles Beard, she organized a chapter of the Women's National Archives Organization in Washington. At present, in addition to being active in the Arts and Letters Society, she is also the head of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Salvation Army.

In spite of the responsibilities Gudrun Hurja assumes, she always has a fresh, rested look, and is ever bright and full of charm.

NO ONE was more anxious to see the opening week show at Collingwood Summer Theater than Brig. Gen. John N. Greely. It took him back 10 years to a demoralizing moment in Scranton, Pa.

Arriving in Scranton to make a speech, General Greely was escorted to the main square of the town, where he found a far bigger crowd than he had anticipated. Not only was every available seat taken, additional people were even standing on top of office buildings surrounding the square.

Everyone was politely attentive as he talked, yet he felt there was a curious lack of enthusiasm, considering the capacity house he had drawn.

When he sat down, still puzzled, it was announced that an 11-year-old Scranton girl, Gloria Jean, would sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

At this point, the crowd went wild, and the general quickly realized who was the drawing card of the day.

This little girl, now grown up, was the leading lady in "Strictly Dishonorable" at Collingwood last week, and the general was way up front applauding her for the second time in their respective careers.

ALTHOUGH Niagara Falls has declined considerably in fashion as a honeymoon resort, Mrs. Charles C. Craver, jr., still cherishes a lingering regret that she missed the scenic wonder on her wedding trip 25 years ago. To make up for it, she's persuaded her husband to take her there to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary this summer.

This time, the sentimental journey will be shared by the Edward Cooks. After seeing the falls, the party will drive on up to Toronto in the Cooks' new station wagon, which they hope to jam full of antiques en route. Collecting is the hobby of all four travelers.

TAXI drivers try hard to please these days—striving, perhaps, to outdo Capital Transit's talking streetcars.

Mrs. William Ridgely tells about the cabbie who asked, "Will you have some music or would you prefer to chat a little?"

Fund Shortage Cited at Trial

Fund shortages of $202.78 were cited by an FBI agent yesterday in the United States Court at Alexandria in the embezzlement trial of Samuel A. Palmer, jr., former note teller at the Burke and Herbert Bank & Trust Co. of Alexandria.

Palmer, 24, of the Abingdon Apartments, Alexandria, pleaded not guilty at the start of the trial yesterday morning to a four-count indictment alleging he misappropriated note payments made to him at the bank in October, 1948. He was indicted last December.

Prince G. Melton, assigned by the FBI to examine the bank records, testified that he found the shortages in ledgers usually handled by Palmer. They represented four separate note payments, all recorded in the ledgers but not included in the daily totals of funds received, Melton said.

Four officials and employes of the bank identified the records as those handled by Palmer in the personal loan department.

All but one prosecution witness had been called when Judge Albert V. Bryan recessed court at 5:30 p. m. The trial will resume at 10 a. m. today.

Soviet Defends Seizure Of Swedish Vessels

Stockholm, Sweden, June 6 (AP). Russia has rejected Sweden's protests against seizure of Swedish fishing vesels in international waters, the Foreign Office said today.

A sharp Russian reply contended the Swedish trawlers Larex and Marion, seized last February by the Russians, were in Soviet waters. It implied the two captains lied about the incident.

Purse Snatch Suspect Held In $15,000 Bail

Raymond J. Bell, driver of a car that police charge was used in two purse snatchings near the Shoreham Hotel Monday night, was held for the grand jury under $15,000 bond yesterday by United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Police said the two victims of the purse snatchings identified Bell's brother-in-law, Alfred Funderburk, 20, of 718 Somerset pl. new., as the man who took their purses.

Two Eighth Precinct policemen wounded Funderburk in the leg while the latter reportedly was fleeing with a purse containing $3000 in jewelry and $200 in cash.

Police said Bell, 22, of 6907 6th st. nw., signed a confession yesterday admitting his part in the snatchings.

Bell told police, they said, that he did not know Funderburk had a "gun" with him. Police recovered a silver-plated toy revolver in the car driven by Bell.

Mrs. Natalie B. Gates, of New York City, stopping at the Shoreham Hotel, said a man carrying a nickel-colored pistol grabbed her purse containing the $3000 in jewels in the 2800 block of McGill ter. nw.

Big Town

New York Newsreel: The Duchess of Talleyrand getting the "Sister-can-you-spare-a-Dime" routine from a hat-tipping panhandler . . . Count Folke Bernadotte's widow and son Bertil (14) hansom-kebbing the park . . . Shelley Winters, the screen siren, at Blue Angel in cerise swedder, checked skirt and flat "gold" sandals . . . Billy Eckstine, en route to a golf course nearly every 4 a. m. after his Bop City routine . . . Ogden (Brownie) Reid, who soon takes over the Paris edition of the Herald Tribune. He is called Brownie because his brother, Whitelaw, is called Whitie . . . Irving Berlin, who just closed a deal with NBC for $200,000 "involving radio and teevy." Isn't it "angel-money" to back the Perle Mesta musical satire? Which they get back in one television shot? . . . Ray Middleton, strolling into the Stork after skillfully taking over Pinza's part in "South Pacific." The entire Cub Room population (for the first time in the history of the place) applauded him.

Sallies in Our Alley: Over at Chablis last night thrush Eva De Luca listened to a group discuss T. S. Eliot, the poet-playwright, who gave up his United States citizenship to be a Briddisher . . . "I see," one said, "that his hit, 'The Cocktail Party,' nets him $3000 weekly" . . . "Yeah," hmf'd Eva, "he gave up everything American but the Money . . . At Tavern-on-the-Green they were reviewing the effect of Television, the new Baby of the Show World . . . "It's been great for show biz," one argued. "Guys like Milton Berle have given vaudeville a shot-in-the-arm" . . . "I know," said another, "but gals like Faye Emerson have killed burlesque!"

Midtown Vignette: She could be heard all over the Childs Restaurant putting in a long distance call. It went something like this: . . . "Ahpuray-tor! May Ah pleez tawk to th' Wong Lee Hand Lawndray in Tuskcaloozah, Alabammy? And ahpuraytor! Pleeze hurraree, Ah'm inna fryful rush" . . . Eventually the call came through and she continued: "Iz thiz th' Wong Lee Hand Lawndray? Iz that you Dah-dee? Well, Tong dee, jung mah wong, jong fah foo gong, sen chu pu wong, you-all!"

Memos of a Midnighter: Big name movie stars are flopping so hard at the box-office (685 movie theatres have closed since January 1) that the moguls are planning a drastic revision in the industry's policies . . . Gladys Swarthout, the opera star, is tussling with penicillin poisoning . . . Eden Ahbez hasn't rec'd a penny in royalties from his song hit, "Nature Boy." Giving it to a foundation (for unfortunates) when he does . . . The Justice Dep't plans another big antitrust suit. When it gets under way Herbert Bergson (chief of that unit) will resign and return to private practice with Peyton Ford, top ass't to Attorney General McGrath . . . The W. G. Hollowways (Anne Kerr) of the Grace Line will be 4 in July . . . The Philly critics embraced Mike Todd's "Peep Show." He says Variety's man called it: "A sure smash hit." We hear the only one who really wears clothes in it is Mike Todd.

Novelette: Sid Grauman, one of the pioneers of Movietown, where Grauman's Chinese Theatre on Hollywood blvd. is world-famed (because of the stars' footprints in the pavement out front) died a few months ago. His estate of about $500,000 in cash is being fought over by 45 kinfolk . . . Most of whom he never knew or met . . . The Woman in His Life claims she married him secretly long ago . . . She will have a difficult time getting a cent—with all of it being divided among the 45 relatives, according to legalities, because he wouldn't sign a will . . . The reason he refused to sign one: He became a "Scientist" and told intimates he feared a will would indicate that he expected to die—and that would have "failed the faith."

Times Square Ticker: The gazettes gave small notice, if any space, to Theresa Helburn and Lawrence Langner's winning of a suit brought by Lee Simonson, Philip Moeller and the estate of Helen Westley. In other words, La Helburn and Le Langner still remain the "The" in The Theatre Guild . . . Judge Sam Leibowitz agreed to help Doubleday with their new book, "Scottsboro Boy," until he discovered his name was misspelled throughout the tome. They spell it Liebowits . . . Vivien Leigh, the British star, leaves "Streetcar" in London this week. Plain weary. She has completely recovered from her long ailment . . . Marie Hammons, local glammer gal, is back in circ after shelving her rich British groom, John Scott.

Success Story: Lois Schenck aspired to the stage . . . Trudging to agents' offices, knocking on TV and radio execs' doors, getting up early for auditions . . . And crying herself to sleep . . . So she got a shoe-shine box—parked in front of Sardi's on 44th—where show people and show producers dine—and Went Into Business . . . A girl's gotta eat . . . That was two years ago . . . Business was so good she became a "corporation" . . . She hired 10 girls, most of them Young Stage Hopefuls, too . . . "Waiting for the Big Break" . . . Today Miss Schenck is President of Shoe-Shine Girls, Inc. . . . They are in big demand for conventions because they are such "a novelty" . . . And they rarely encounter a customer who waits for his change . . . Lois has been written up in 16 magazines to date. As a shoe-shiner . . . But never as a President.

The Late Watch: Mrs. Xavier Cugat says what she told the col'm about her estranged maestro's settlement-offer is true. He wires: "It would be wonderful if you could settle it for us. If all she wants is $15,000, please let me give it to you to give to her! And I'll love you forever. P.S.: I'll add $5000 to the Runyan Fund, too!" Well, Mrs. Cugat? Come and cuget it . . . 'To Insure Promptness'

Most Ticklish Travel Topic Is Tipping

This is the third installment of a series of six that gives a new slant on vacation adventures, whether you take your holiday at home or abroad. This can save money on your tips, wherever you go.

These articles are condensed from "Your Trip Abroad," a book just published by Doubleday & Co. The author is president of the Travel Writers' Association and travel editor of Esquire magazine.

By Richard Joseph

CHAPTER III

If there's one subject that bedevils the traveler—even the most sophisticated—more than any other, it's the ticklish topic of tipping.

To Insure Promptness is supposed to have been the origin of the word tip. Today tipping is much more to insure your not getting a hole in your head, a thumb in your soup, than it is to get special speed or extra service.

Very few people like the business of tipping. Even the recipients of the tips don't like it sometimes, since their wages are usually very low in expectation of tips received. An occasional encounter with a rugged individualist who refuses to tip can have a drastic effect on their income.

Those who over-tip have been blamed for much of the tipping difficulty. The visitor abroad who throws his francs, lire and pesos around as though they were cigar coupons is as responsible as Hollywood for the too-widespread impression that all Americans are millionaires.

He makes it tough for his more conservative compatriot who follows him. Hotel and restaurant people who have been deluded into thinking that all Americans throw their money around sometimes start resenting those who don't. You'll find that people who tip adequately but don't over-tip, usually are respected as travel-wise men and women of the world.

One thing you can be sure of: most people are at least as confused about tipping practices as you are, since there is very little precise information on the subject. As a travel reporter, however, I have been able to ask questions about tipping which might be embarrassing for the average traveler to ask.

American tipping practices have come to be regarded as fairly standard procedure all over the world. United States customs are correct for Bermuda, Nassau, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. You can translate these tips into the currency you are using in any other country you happen to be in, and you can be quite sure you're not tipping incorrectly.

Restaurants: Gone with the war is the old 10 per cent custom. Nowadays you'll find that waiters in the best restaurants expect their tip to amount to 15 per cent of the check—approximately, but rarely less.

Bus boys aren't tipped, generally, since they share in the tips of the waiters they're working with. Headwaiters usually aren't tipped either, unless they've shown you to a special table, at your request, or performed some other special service for you.

What you tip the headwaiter depends on you—but make it folding money, never change.

A dime is all right to give to the hatcheck bandit or washroom attendant. They usually work on salary and turn their tips over to the concessionaire. However, few people have strength of character enough to do that, so 15 cents is more or less getting to be the minimum.

Hotels: A quarter per bag to the bellhop or porter, $1 for lugging up your trunk. Bellhops expect a quarter, too, for delivering telegrams or messages, paging somebody for you, or bringing ice-water or setups to your room.

Give the doorman a nice smile if you're in a car or a cab and he opens the door to let you out, but if he finds you a cab tip him a quarter. If you've stayed a couple of days, give the chambermaid about 25 cents per day per person. If you don't see her before you leave put the money in an envelope, mark it "Maid" and leave it on the dresser.

The above applies to transient hotels. In resort hotels you tip most of the help when you leave, except for the bellboys whom you tip as the service is performed.

Leave the chambermaid $1 per person for every week you stay, 50 cents per day per person if you stay only a couple of days. The waiter or waitress who serves you should be tipped $2 or $3 per person per week.

Give the headwaiter or headwaitress $1 per person per week, a $5 bill from a couple leaving at the end of a two-week stay is very welcome.

Barber and Beauty Shops: A quarter has become the minimum tip in first-class barber shops, and that for a haircut only. Up the ante as the services and the hot towels pile on.

The shoeshine and coat-helper-on boy rates a dime. A quarter to a half-dollar is adequate for the manicurist. In beauty shops attendants expect a 25-cent tip for each operation costing up to $1.25 and 35 cents to 50 cents for each of the more expensive routines.

Bars: It's not usually necessary to tip the bartender, unless he can get a particularly sympathetic look on his face as you tell him your troubles. Then a dime per drink if you're drinking alone, or a quarter per round, if you're buying for others will make you a big sport. Bar waiters expect a minimum of a dime per round or 15 percent of the check at the end of the evening.

En Route: Cab drivers consider 15 cents the minimum tip for fares up to about 75 cents. From 75 cents to a dollar, a 20-cent tip is adequate. For fares from a dollar up, give a quarter per dollar, or 20-25 per cent of whatever the meter reads.

Station porters should be given a quarter per bag.

On a train give the Pullman porter 50 cents per night if you're occupying a berth, 75 cents to a dollar for more elaborate accommodations.

On Shipboard: Ship's personnel are usually tipped at the end of the trip, except for cruises, when it's becoming fashionable to give half your tip at the halfway mark.

You tip the bar steward, though, as you're served. On cruises of more than a week, your cabin and dining-room stewards should be tipped a minimum of 50 cents per person per day. If there are two of you, and you've been out on a 13-day cruise, you'd tip the cabin steward and the dining-room steward $15, not $13.

If there's no bathroom in your cabin give the bath attendant a couple of dollars at the end of your trip. In addition to the fee for renting a deck chair, you should also give the deck steward $3 to $5 for bringing you drinks and snacks, getting you blankets and pillows, tucking you in, introducing you to the young blonde traveling with her old uncle, and so forth.

On the Plane: You don't tip. Airline people are the only ones who seem to have eliminated the tipping bugaboo from their operations. Only one to tip, and then only if you feel like it, is a quarter or so to the porter who piles your luggage on the airport limousine.

(Copyright, 1950, by Richard Joseph. Published by Doubleday & Co.; Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.).

Tomorrow: If you're traveling by plane.

NBC Report Says

One Family in Seven Now Has Television

—By C. E. Butterfield—

NEW YORK (AP).—Television sets continue to come off the production lines at such an accelerated pace that the national total is estimated already to have passed the six-million mark. This was the figure originally projected for the end of 1950.

Available data supplied by the Radio Manufacturers' Association show that its members turned out a total of 1,647,956 receivers in the first quarter of this year alone. These represented approximately one-third of the grand total for all types produced, which was 4,921,614.

Basis for the six-million figure is found in the monthly compilation by NBC researchers, who reported that on May 1 the number of sets installed in the country's 60 or more television areas had reached 5,846,000. With the monthly production well around a half-million, the June 1 compilation should easily register the new total.

Taking the country as a whole, it is estimated that about one out of every seven families now owns a TV receiver. Projecting this only into TV areas, the ratio changes sharply to one out of every four families.

A steady demand which shows little indication of letting up has forced production upward. The increased output and keener competition have had the opposite effect on retail prices.

A 10-inch receiver, once rated at $375, now can be bought for as low as $99. Models with larger screens, where the present attention is being centered, run around $160 for 12½-inch and $250 for 16-inch.

Sale prices in some metropolitan areas have gone even lower—$70 for discontinued 10-inch models and $40 for used 7-inch sets.

Burns and Allen, on vacation from CBS, are getting ready for a television audition in Hollywood in the prospect of spending their time before the cameras next season rather than the microphone.

FREEMAN GOSDEN, who plays Amos and de Kingfish on CBS' "Amos 'n' Andy," has arrived in New York from Hollywood, following the season's end of the popular comedy program, for several weeks' visit to the East Coast. Accompanied by Mrs. Gosden, he plans to attend the graduation of his son, Freeman Gosden, jr., at Princeton June 11-13, and then to entertain his son in New York before the younger Gosden leaves to join a Texas oil firm. Gosden's daughter, Virginia, who was graduated from Bradford Junior College in Boston last year, also will visit her parents here. After a stay of two or three weeks in the metropolis, Mr. and Mrs. Gosden will visit Washington and Gosden's home city, Richmond, Va., before returning to their home in Hollywood.

The William Wrigley, jr., Co. of Chicago, sponsor of CBS' "Gene Autry Show" and "Life with Luigi," has bought 36 half-hour summer broadcasts, from June 14 to August 8, of six Columbia package radio programs.

The programs involved are "Broadway's My Beat," "The Adventures of Philip Marlowe," "Yours Truly, Johnny Dollar," "Pursuit," "Romance" and "Cloud Nine." The first three shows are current network series originating in Hollywood. Both "Pursuit" and "Romance" are returning to the air after short absences. "Cloud Nine," a popular feature on WBBM, CBS' Chicago station, will make its network bow.

LIFE WITH FATHER

"If we were little cats and dogs being stifled by noxious fumes, there would be an immediate outery in our behalf," writes E. A. Kendall of 3233 S. 3d st., Arlington, Va.

"But we're just non-smoking humans who happen to enjoy good old oxygen, so nobody cares. There isn't a restaurant in town where we can get a meal without also getting a side order of cigar and cigarette fumes."

Smokers may find it hard to realize how offensive their second-hand fumes can be to those who are not addicted to the weed.

But I've had many years of indoctrination. For years, my Dad smoked two dozen fierce black cigars a day. But when Mother asked him to stop, he quit cold.

Then he said he couldn't abide being in a room in which somebody was smoking, and to this day we children have to humor him, and leave the room to smoke.

However, I've noticed that there's one exception to his allergy. He's never been known to object to great billows of smoke issuing from the cigar of a client who is about to sign on the dotted line of a big contract.

COMPLAINT DEPT.

Some days, folks who contribute features to The Washington Post can't get away with a thing.

For example, a recent Walter Winchell column told about the the great value of Sir Walter Raleigh's original pipe. He said: "It's kept in a safe with an armed guard." Whereupon Mrs. Luella M. Moyer of 4211 18th st. nw. quipped:

"That armed guard must also be pretty valuable, if they find it necessary to lock him up, too."

Mrs. D. Blatt of Harrisonburg, Va., has a puzzler for the artists who turn out the Mary Worth comic strip.

Just before Mary started on the railroad trip, her purse was stolen. But a few panels later, she was carrying a purse again —and Mrs. Blatt wonders whether the railroad candy butchers now sell them.

Several baseball fans have written in to complain about a recent Ozark Ike strip. When Dinah conked herself on the head with a bat, Ozark ran to her side to see if she was hurt.

Then we were informed: "Ozark was called out for running out of the base path."

Our keen-eyed baseball bugs immediately set up a yowl that the cartoonist was rewriting the rules. And Shirley "Mr. Baseball" Povich says they're absolutely right. He rules:

"A runner is not called out merely because he leaves the baseline; only when he leaves the line to avoid being tagged. If no play has been made on him, he can go to the dugout, get a drink of water, and even phone his folks in Peoria, if he chooses—and still return to the diamond and try to reach a proper base safely before he is tagged out or forced out."

I trust that Mrs. Worth and Messrs. Winchell and McBatt (isn't that Ozark's last name?) will take these criticisms to heart and be more careful hereafter.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two 7-week-old kittens; one is very beautiful and knows it, the other is so homely he's handsome." (Wisconsin 1530.)

"Wonderful 5-year-old cat; housebroken. We're moving." (Columbia 7744, extension 108-W.)

"Darling housebroken 6-week-old refined kitten." (Emerson 2923.)

"Two 5-month-old toy collie dogs; would prefer to keep them together as they've never been separated." (District 4827.)

THIS IS WASHINGTON

The little boy held tight to his father's hand as they entered the Capitol rotunda. His wide-eyed gaze swept the grandeur of the scene as his father explained:

"This is where all our laws come from."

"You mean like the Ten Commandments?" piped the lad.

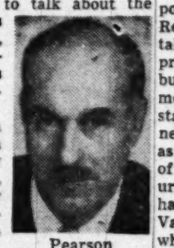
The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Pentagon Records Conversation

By Drew Pearson

Frank McCall, of the National Broadcasting Co., doesn't know it, but when he came to Washington the other day to talk about the Armed Forces television show, his entire conversation was secretly recorded.



Pearson

NBC has been putting on a television show for the Army, Navy and Air Forces as a public service. No charge is made. However, the quality of the show has not been up to par, and NBC has been worried. That was why McCall came to Washington.

Meanwhile, the National Defense Department got from Congress a nice fistful of the taxpayers' money to build a special radio studio in the Pentagon Building with new wire-recording apparatus, and so forth.

This apparatus is supposed to be used to promote armed forces morale, not to spy on private citizens who are trying to help their country—with no charge to the taxpayers.

But before NBC Executive McCall arrived, Charles Dillon, in charge of the Armed Forces television show, arranged to have McCall's conversation recorded. Thus McCall, who didn't know his words were being taken down on tape, could be put in the position of being to blame for the poor quality of the Armed Forces program. Naturally Dillon, who knew his words were being recorded, could take pains to see that what he said was right.

"That's how some of the taxpayers' money is being spent.

Congressional 'Economy'

While Congress preaches economy and prepares to slash another billion dollars from the civilian functions of the Government, Congressmen have indulged in a certain brand of economy that benefits themselves, but not Uncle Sam.

They are evading the 15 percent transportation tax that every other citizen of the U. S. has to pay. The way they do this is by claiming their trips are on Government business, when actually they are private.

Worst offenders are Senator William Langer, North Dakota Republican; Representative Homer Angell,, Oregon Republican, and Representative Abraham Multer, New York Democrat.

Legally, they cannot escape the travel tax unless the Government actually pays their fare. And if they are traveling on congressional committee business, that committee must initiate the exemption request.

However, Langer, Angell and Multer have been signing their own exemption certificates, using a form that the Bureau of Internal Revenue had ruled not legal for members of Congress. Ticket offices have been advised not to accept this form from Congressmen, but Langer, Angell and Multer have disregarded the warnings of ticket girls.

In fact, Representative Angell even started to write out an exemption certificate for his wife when he bought airplane tickets to Oregon for Easter vacation. The ticket girl protested that neither he nor his wife was entitled to the tax deduction, but Angell brushed aside the girl's objections.

The girl figured about $22.

"Well, never mind," Angell decided, and finally paid his wife's tax.

Afterward, when this column asked Representative Angell why he did not pay the transportation tax on his own ticket, he protested that he was violating no law, though he also admitted that the girl at the transportation desk had warned him. When reminded that on the tax-exemption certificate there was printed in bold-face type: "Penalty for fraudulent use, $10,000 or imprisonment or both," he protested that he would refund the money to the Government if he was wrong. Later he did.

The violations have been reported to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, but no action has been taken. The bureau will prosecute private citizens for tax violation, but just doesn't like to tangle with members of Congress. For instance, former Congressman Parnell Thomas, now in jail, was just as guilty of income-tax evasion as of kickbacks. But the U. S. Treasury has failed to prosecute. Nor has it prosecuted General Vaughan's friend, John Maragon, who perpetrated a glaring and clear-cut income tax fraud.

Senator McCarthy and Roy Howard of the Scripps-Howard newspapers don't know it yet, but General "Wild Bill" Donovan, famed wartime chief of OSS, let them down on the Amerasia stolen documents case.

General Donovan, a fellow Republican, was ballyhooed as backing up the McCarthy-Scripps-Howard charges. When interviewed by a Senate committee shortly before leaving for Europe, however, he talked much more like Senator Margaret Chase Smith of Maine who decries McCarthy extremism.

In fact, General Donovan inferentially criticized his own OSS investigator, Frank Bielaski, for illegally raiding the Amerasia office, and the FBI for illegally raiding Emmanuel Larsen's apartment. As a result of these illegal raids, the Justice Department could not prosecute.
